Today

Said Ford to Tunney. "Go Preach." China, Japan and War. Mediate, No, Thanks.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1928.)

THEODORE, king of the upstairs dining room of New York's Ritz-Carlton, was pleased yesterday, having a variegated clientele to appreciate his complicated menu.

Three men sat at one table, and one, as big as the three put together, at another table. The three and the one caused much twisting of necks.

THE big one was Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion. The three were Henry Ford, just back from Europe, his son, Edsel Ford, and Gaston Plantiff, Ford manager in the East.

FORD, his piercing gray eyes making him look like an American eagle, surprised Tunney when he wandered over to that gentleman's table. Instead of asking, "What do you think of the next fight?" Ford said: Mr. Tunney, you ought to be a preacher. What young people need today is good advice and a good example.

"The young admire physical power and pay scant attention to the most brilliant preacher, if he happens to be small and weak.

"They would listen to anything you might say. You set an example of wise living and have the splendid physical condition that young people admire. Think it over.

"They tell me that in one fight you earned as much as a million dollars. After one or two millions, more won't do you any good; only worry you. Try preaching."

MR. TUNNEY, who looked like a blond, tall, wide mountain compared with Mr. Ford, promised to think about it seriously, muttering, under his breath, from Hamlet, "His form and cause, conjoined, preaching to stones, would make them capable."

Ford, after luncheon, went with his son and Mr. Plantiff to inspect his plant in Long Island City across the Fifty-ninth Street bridge.

EUROPE is doing well, recovering steadily, according to Ford, and the United States will keep present prosperity and get more through the summer and fall, "and the Presidential election will have nothing to do with it."

"Produce the best article you can, keep prices is low as you can, pay workers as much as you can, see that they do good work for good pay." That's all there is to success, according to Ford, but you must keep improving, never be satisfied. His Detroit plants will be turning out 5,000 cars a day on July 1st, 6,000 a day by the end of July, says Ford.

ASKED how he managed to make his new car run so smoothly on rough roads, Ford replied, "It runs that way because Edsel and I worked for two years at every detail of it."

CROWN PRINCE CAROL, who wants to make a fool king of Rumania, is put out of England, not allowed to go to France, and thinks of visiting us. Plenty of fools here will feed and honor anything that calls itself "royalty."

WAR threatens between Japan and China, although it is hard to say who, in China, could declare or wage war. A suggestion that the United States act as mediator in the quarrel leaves us cold. The United States should mind the business of the United States and let Asia settle its fights in its Asiatic way. We recently got into one war. That ought to last us a long time.

JAPAN has sent 15,000 more soldiers to China and evidently means business. Nemo me impune lacessit, translated into Japanese, is Nippon's, as well as Scotland's motto. China will learn the meaning of those Latin words.

"CALL money," used for Wall Street speculating and gambling, cost 6 per cent yesterday, and that was like passing around the death's head at ancient feasts. But it was only a temporory lull. You can't put out an oil fire with a cup of cold water.

SOME protest against postoffice stamps showing Washington kneeling in prayer at Valley Forge. "Washington did not kneel in prayer, he was too practical," say the foolish. How do they know?

Froissart describes the French and English kings kneeling, praying and making all their men at arms pray, the night before the battle of Crecy.

Game starts at 3:30.

A victory scored today through their own might and valor and a slight push by Lady Luck may hurtle the Pirates into the muchly coveted first place in the National League pennant chase.

As a result of the 6-5 triumph scored over the New Yorkers yesterday, the Pirates today are just half a game out of first place. Cincinnati, though, is somewhat less than that, and it is in the matter of the Reds' that Lady Luck must take a hand. In the event the Buccos do tumble the Giants again today, the Reds must either remain idle or be beaten if Pittsburgh is to cop the league leadership. A victory for the Redlegs will send them scooting into the lead and will put the Pirates in second place and the McGrawmen to third.

Manager Donie Bush would like to send Remy Kremer, ace of the staff, to the hill against the Giants today, but Remy's blistered foot has forced him to change his plans, and Joe Dawson will be used.

Manager McGraw, confident that his team will have recovered from the inept play of yesterday, has Virgil Barnes groomed for duty on the mound, and will bank heavily on the clever right-hander as he sets his plans for turning back the Pirates.

INDIANAFOR WATSON

By EUGENE J. CADOU,
International News Service.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 9.—United States Senator James E. Watson has defeated Herbert Hoover for Indiana's presidential indorsement on the basis of unofficial returns received today from most of the state's 3,610 precincts in yesterday's primary election.

Reports received from 2,720 precincts gave Watson 155,837, Hoover 130,605.

CITIES FOR HOOVER

Hoover polled a heavy vote in Indianapolis, Fort Wayne, the cities of the Calumet district, and other centers of population. Watson's strength came from the rural sections of the state.

As the city vote was tabulated first, Hoover went into an early lead which led many to believe he

FLIERS AT PHILA.

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—(AP.)—The crew of the trans-Atlantic airplane Bremen arrived here today, the first stop in their swing around the eastern part of the country.

The German-Irish crew landed at the Philadelphia Navy Yard in the F-13, sister ship of the Bremen, at 11:37 a. m., from Curtiss Field, New York.

A light drizzle was falling when the F-13 landed in a muddy spot on the field.

ENDURANCE FLYING ACE KILLED IN CRASH

HASBROUCK HEIGHTS, N. J., May 9.—Lieut. Royal V. Thomas, who set a new endurance record for a solo airplane flight a week ago, and Vaughn Weatherly, aeronautical engineer, were killed today when the Bellanca airplane in which they were making a speed test crashed on the grounds of the Teterboro Golf Club.

Thomas, a member of the Reserve Flying Corps of the Army, was one of the outstanding pilots in the East. His solo endurance record, eclipsing Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's, was made over Long Island while he was attempting to take the world endurance record away from George Haldeman and Eddie Stinson.

Thomas and Weatherly had taken off from Teterboro airport across the highway from the golf club. They were flying low in the same plane in which Thomas had set his solo record when the plane turned over several times, as in a barrel roll, and then plunged down.

It struck the earth tail first. The bodies of the two fliers were crushed and officials from the airport experienced difficulty extricating them from the wreckage.

HELD AS WASHINGTON "HIT AND RUN" DRIVER

WASHINGTON, Pa., May 9.—Emil Charlier, 35, charged with failing to stop after striking a pedestrian, was held in $1,500 bail here today. He is charged with hitting Mrs. Helen Andranick, of Atlasburg, Pa. She was not hurt seriously. A reward of $100 is offered by the Washington Motor Club, for "hit-run" drivers.

Courted In Plane

CLAIRE LUCE

Claire Luce, that blonde dancer discovered by Ziegfeld, has plighted her troth to Clifford Warren Smith, member of the New York Yacht Club. He was a pilot, the story goes, when she enrolled as a student pilot at Curtiss Field—yes, the flyin' bug's reached the stage!—and much of the courtship was carried on in an airplane.

CHEATED, HE BARES LIQUOR GRAFT

The United States Government is probing to the very heart of Pittsburgh's liquor ring.

The sweeping investigation is said to involve politicians, police officials and scores of bootleggers.

A federal grand jury sat past midnight today hearing nearly 100 witnesses and resumed its probe this afternoon. The grand jurors are expected to authorise many arrests.

The investigation is based on the confession of a former bootlegger who tired of paying enormous sums for "protection."

These were the facts (some called them only gossip) that were whispered about the Federal Building today as United States Attorney John D. Meyer and Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington carried on their extensive operations of the last few days in utmost secrecy.

BUSY TUESDAY

There could, however, be no secret of the fact that prohibition agents spent a busy Tuesday rushing to several parts of the city, serving subpenas on witnesses who were believed to know of the ramifications of this wide rum ring.

It was regarded as highly significant that many of the witnesses who were paraded before the grand jury were brought in from the North Side and Woods Run—and that, after testifying, were not permitted to leave the government's custody.

The bootlegger-confesser, described as the former distributor for the ring, is said to have taken this attitude—"I don't care what happens. I'll tell everything." His confession, it was gossiped, came after he had been "touched" by the powers—"touches" that lost him $25,000.

There was no official confirmation of the report that this confessor had told Meyer and Pennington that the sale of booze on the North Side and in other sections of the city was tightly controlled by politicians. The government authorities would say nothing of the talk that they hold a list of booze joints which are "O. K." with the bosses. If, however, such talk is true, it was presumed that among the many witnesses who testified before the grand jury were the proprietors of t'e "O. K. joints."

A story that bordered on fantasy was patched together today from the several versions that have arisen since the agents started the roundup of witnesses. The rum ring's moonshine, so they say, costs 37 cents and is sold at $3—per gallon.

Harmless beer is installed in the favored joints—and then the "shooting" crew arrives. The duties of this crew appear to be to instill life and more than one-half of one per cent—this precaution taken to avoid federal raids during the hauling process.

The bootlegger-confessor voluntarily went to Pennington, one hears whispered, with the story that racketeers, with the inclination to violate the prohibition laws, must buy from the rum ring—or be raided!

"The ring dropped me," this confessor is quoted. "They cheated me, so I'll tell. They can't do anything but put me in jail."

ADVENTURER'S BODY FOUND AT SEA

Tom Kingsley, young man with a yen for adventure, started for China. Today, after years of silence, word was received here from Singapore that he was found at sea, dead, with his body floating in a small open boat.

Capt. Sweeney, of an inter island trading boat that picked up the small craft and Kingsley's body told authorities at Singapore that Kingsly, whom he knew in years past, had probably been murdered.

While the authorities believe robbery was the incentive, the skipper has other theories.

After searching the dead man's clothing for valuables, a loaded revolver, some small trinkets considered neglible, and two small delicately carved ivory idols were found. These and a few pieces of silver were all his possessions left.

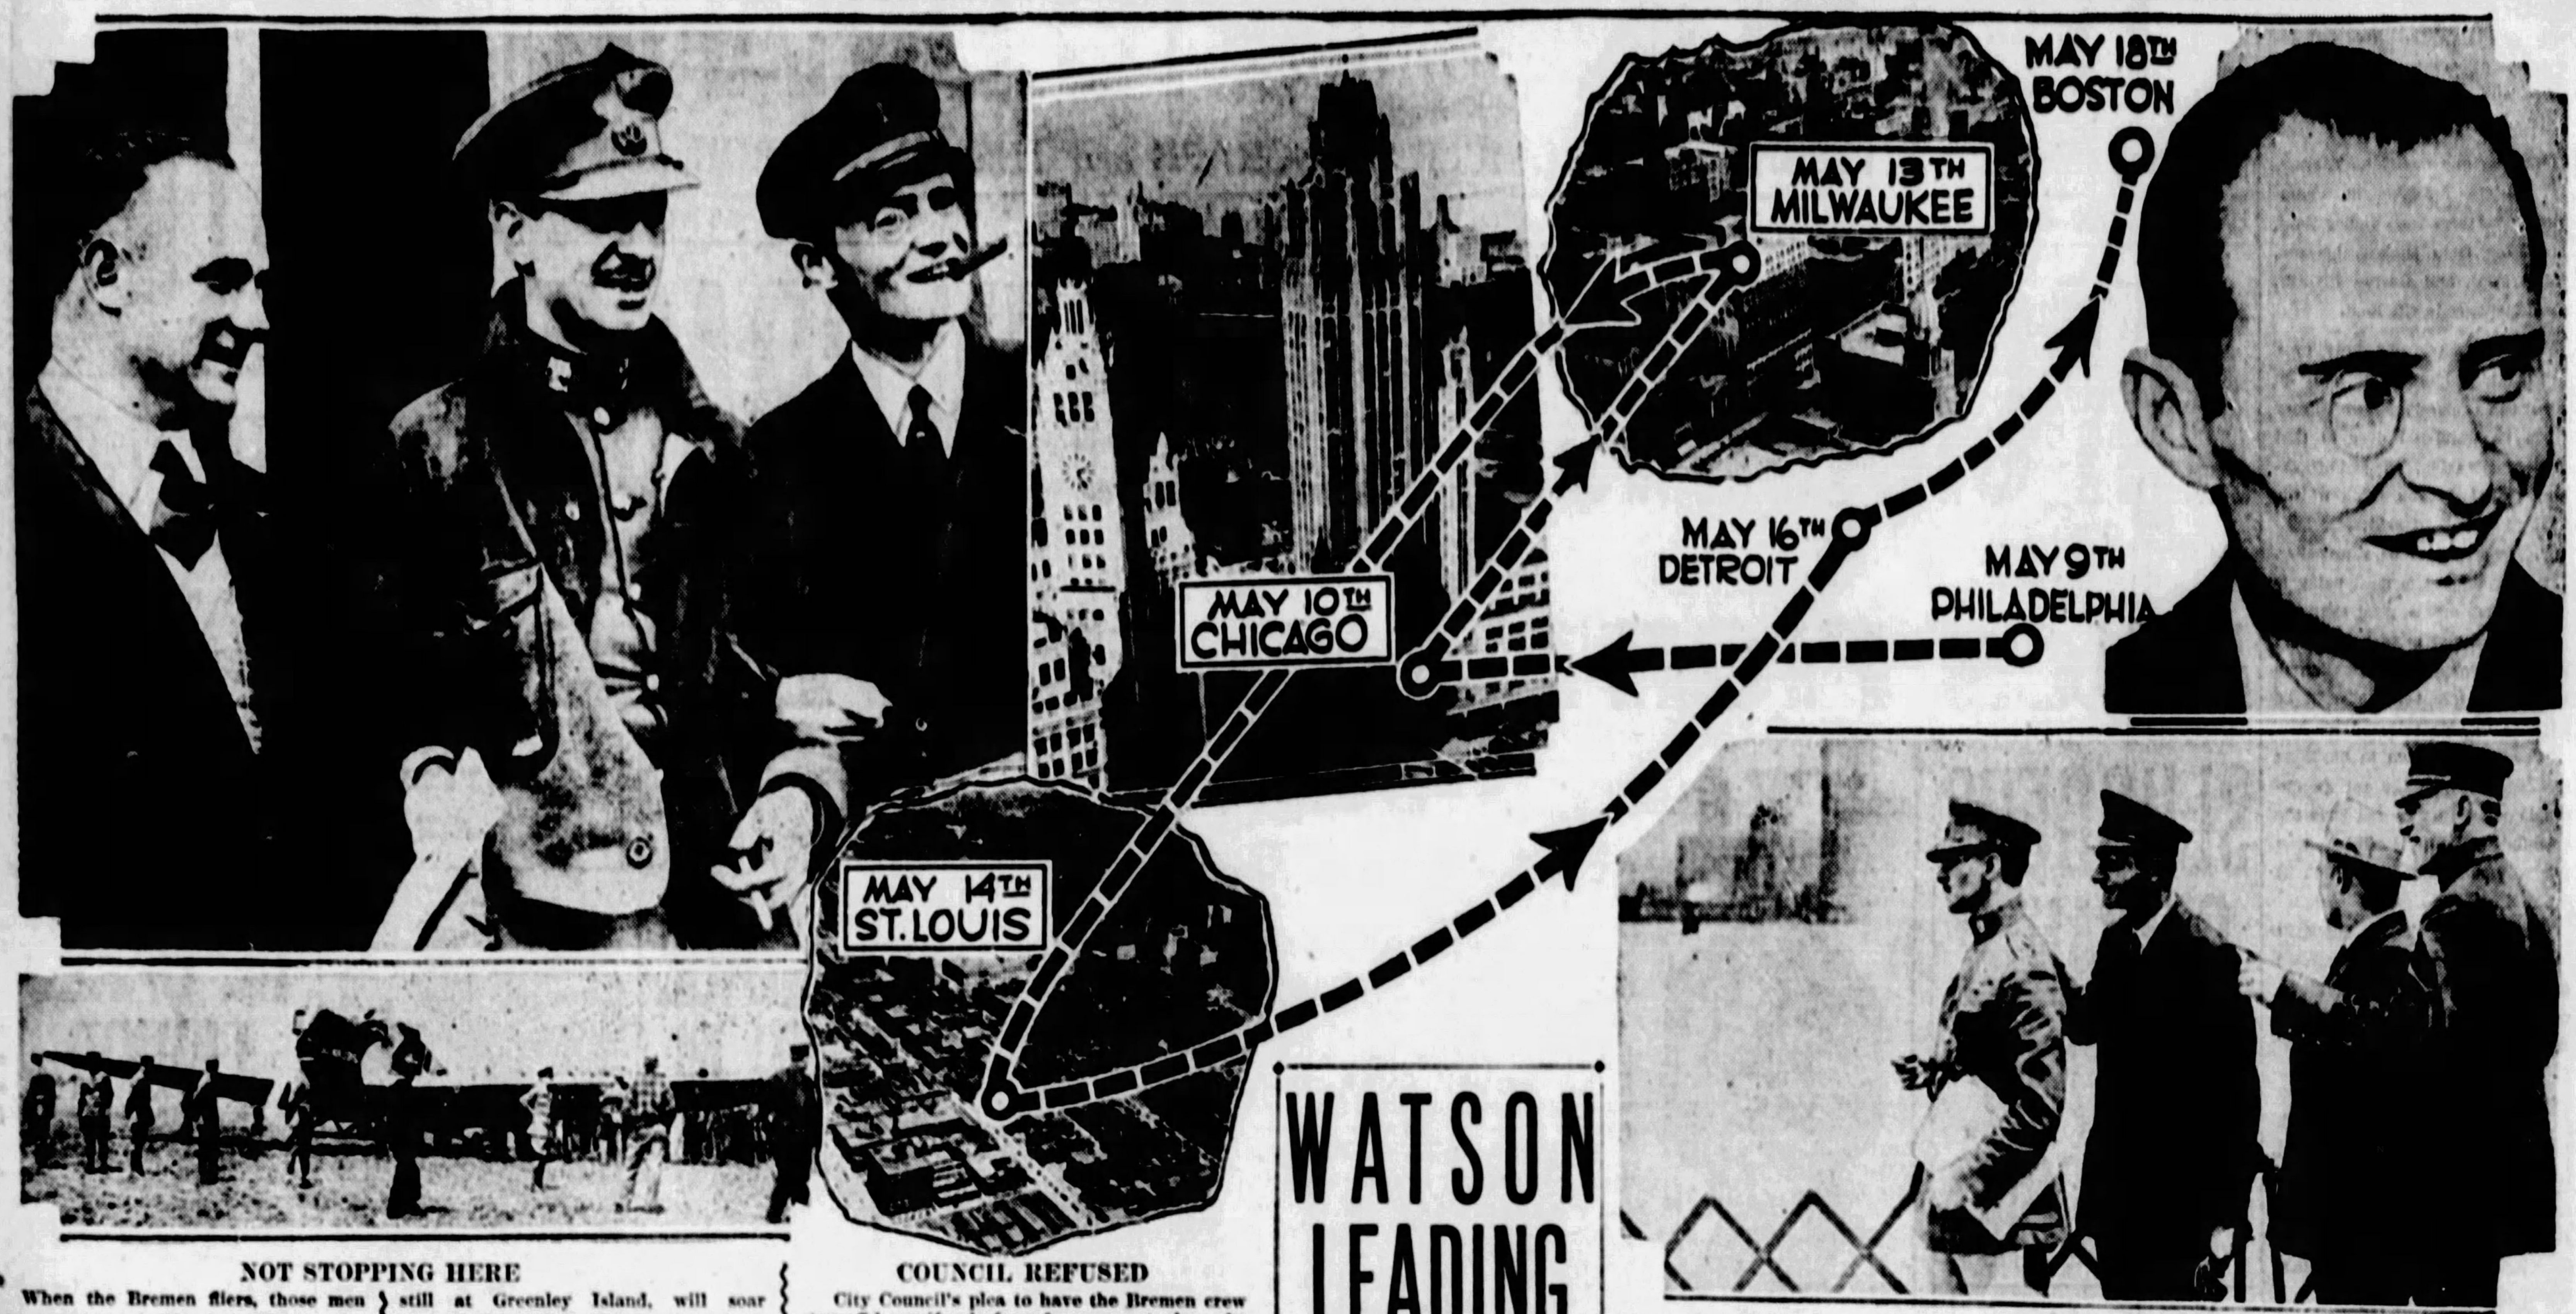
Shooting as a theory was scouted by Capt. Sweeney, the message said, because there were no marks of violence on Kingsley's body. Authorities notified a brother and a nephew, Bob Kingsley, planters and traders on a small island several hundred miles off Singapore.

The relatives attach considerable importance to the ivory idols—the "Two Stolen Idols." Frank L. Packkard, noted author of mystey stories will give complete details Monday in the Sun-Telegraph. Start this engaging story charged with thrills, passions, mystery, love. "Two Stolen Idols" begins Monday. Start it in the Sun-Tele.

AMERICANS FLEE CHINA FIGHTING

LET ME STAY, CAROL PLEADS TO BRITAIN

Bremen Fliers ON "GOOD WILL" TOUR OF U. S. SOAR OVER PITTSBURGH ON CHICAGO ROUTE FROM PHILADELPHIA Tomorrow



NOT STOPPING HERE

When the Bremen fliers, those men whom America worships today, take up their "good will" tour of the United States, they'll not stop in Pittsburgh. No, sir, they won't stop in Pittsburgh, but the F-13, sister ship of the Bremen, still at Greenley Island, will soar through Pittsburgh district skies on its way from Philadelphia to Chicago. The route is outlined here and the fliers, Capt. Koehl, Maj. Fitzmaurice and Baron von Huenefeld are shown to the top, with the F-13 below.

COUNCIL REFUSED

City Council's plea to have the Bremen crew stop off here, if only for a few moments, brought no results. Perhaps the fliers, anyhow, wouldn't want to see Pittsburgh, blast furnace of the world, the city that provided the Allies with air "aces" during the World War, fused most of the munitions, makes most of the world's steel and digs much of the world's coal.

WORLD IDOLS

Today the world idolizes these men. Here they look at New York's skyline, but they will look at Pittsburgh, perhaps, only from above, a fleeting view. Would they like to see the city with one of the world's greatest civic centers? The greatest industrial research institute? The center of a coal strike that affects the world? Three outstanding universities? Engineering feats that have astounded industry? The haunts of Langley, world pioneer airman? The tiny factory that has produred the "props" for a majority of the trans-oceanic fliers? Oh, well, perhaps not.

EXPULSION FOUGHT BY CAROL

LONDON, May 9.—(AP.)—Former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania hoped today to convince the British government that its Home Secretary was mistaken when he announced in the House of Commons: "The Prince's stay in this country is no longer desirable."

Through his host, M. Jonescu, Carol announced that he was writing Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, pleading to be allowed to remain in England with the understanding that he report all his movements to the home office. He denied that he was pursuing subversive propaganda, or that he ordered manifestoes printed announcing that he was willing to return to Rumania and take the throne from his 6-year-old son, King Michael, or that he knew of attempts to convey manifestoes out of England.

Magda Lupescu, with whom Carol eloped, intends to stand by him to the end of his difficulties. In hysterics, she announced that she would accompany him wherever it was necessary for him to go but would "fade out of Carol's life as soon as he is called to the throne."

AMERICANS FLEE CHINA BATTLE

SHANGHAI, May 9.—(AP.)—With a virtual state of war existing between Japan and Nationalist China, nearly all Americans who have been in the blood-bathed city of Tsinan were believed to be on their way to safety today.

Seventeen Americans, nine men, six women and two children were on a train headed for Isingtao from Tsinan. Four British, one Italian and one French citizen were also aboard the train. Japanese and Germans, however, remained in the zone.

The Japanese offered to evacuate all consuls because of "fear that a state of war might be forced upon them at any time." The American, British and German consuls, however, decided to remain in Tsinan.

STATE OF WAR EXISTS

The Japanese consulate at Shanghai announced that the Nationalists had refused to comply with a Japanese ultimatum.

In all save a formal declaration of war Japan therefore was at actual hostilities with Nationalist China.

The Japanese demands included, first, withdrawal of Nationalist troops to a distance of seven miles on each side of the railway between Tsingtao and Tsinan; second, punishment of commanders of troops responsible for recent "murders" of Japanese at Tsinan; third, disarmament of southern troops who have been guilty of excesses at Tsinan, and fourth, cessation of demonstrations against Japanese as well as of all hostile preparations.

VETERANS FAVOR MEETING REBS

"I'm all for it," said R. N. Spohn, president of the Allegheny County Association of the Grand Army of the Republic, commenting on the suggestion that the G. A. R. and the United Confederate Veterans hold a joint reunion next year in some Southern city.

Delegates from Macon, Ga., made the suggestion before a gathering of the U. C. V. in Little Rock, Ark.

"And I'd go to it, too," Mr. Spohn continued, "if such a meeting were held. I was treated fine in Memphis last year. Civil War bitterness has practically died out. We old fellows don't hold with it."

But it is not likely many local veterans would attend, Major A. B. Hay, National Commander of the Union Veteran Legion, and Col. Samuel Evans, adjutant general, declared. The few still living are too feeble to make the long trip, they say.

"A reunion would be a fine thing, but the excitement involved and the long trip would cause too great a hardship on the majority of those living," they said.

In Allegheny county there are but 175 veterans living. In the United States, according to Col. Evans, there are living 78,000 veterans out of 2,200,000 who served in the war. Allegheny county's quota was 27,000, enlisted and emergency troops.

The farmers are said to have backed Watson "almost to a man," in the belief that he would throw his support to Lowden or Dawes if he himself were put out of the running at Kansas City.

NO CHOICE FOR GOVERNOR

Both Republican and Democratic gubernatorial races probably will be determined in state conventions, for the party vote was so split between the record number of 17 candidates that none this morning had the necessary majority in the primary struggle.

The strength of Frederick Landis, Logansport editor, was the biggest surprise of the gubernatorial contest. He was running second only to Secretary of State Frederick E. Schortemeier, the organization man, with Thomas H. Adams, crusading Vincennes publisher, third.

"Dry" Candidate Is Arrested for Drunkenness

KOKOMO, Ind., May 9.—(INS.)—This city was "shocked" today over the arrest of Olin R. Holt, prominent attorney and candidate in yesterday's primary election for the Democratic nomination for Governor. He was charged with "public intoxication."

Holt was indorsed as an outstanding dry by the local W. C. T. U. recently and by Dr. E. S. Shumaker, superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League. He was arrested in an alley last night where, according to police, he was staggering around "blind drunk."

It is not yet known how Holt fared in the primary. He is one of the attorneys who represented E. H. Stephenson, imprisoned former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan.

Note Tells of Strife on Princess' Lost Sea Flier

Associated Press.

WESTERLY, R. I. May 9.

IN A bottle described as having been picked up on the beach at Watch Hill last night and brought here by Morrell K. Barr was a message purporting to be signed by Princess Lowenstein of the plane St. Raphael which was lost on an attempted non-stop flight from England to Canada in the latter part of last year.

The message was as follows:

Capts. Hamilton and Minchen had a quarrel over the course, struck water and sinking fast. Can see light in distance, think off Block Island. Everything out of order now. Ship good for a few seconds yet.

"PRINCESS LOWENSTEIN."

The message was in lead pencil written lengthwise on ledger roll paper. Barr said he was keeping the message in an effort to check up on the handwriting.

HOOVER IRE ROUSED BY PROBER

WASHINGTON, May 9.—(AP.)—Herbert Hoover underwent a searching examination today at the hands of the Senate Campaigns Fund Committee, testifying that his personal expenditures might total $200, and telling his interrogators at one time that he wondered if they were not dealing in a "pretty low type of street slander."

The Secretary of Commerce and Republican presidential candidate said friends had his campaign in hand, and that the money he had spent personally was largely for telephone calls. He said he had made no promises of patronage in the event of his election.

There was a flare-up when Senator Barkley (Dem.), Kentucky, asked if Hoover had recommended that the price of chinaware be increased 15 per cent. This brought an emphatic disclaimer from Hoover, with the added remark that "I wonder if the gentlemen of the committee are not getting down to dealing in a pretty low type of street slander."

have been worse," said Maj. James C. Fitzmaurice, one of the fliers.

Capt. Hermann Koehl, who was at the controls; Baron Gunther von Huenefeld and Maj. Fitzmaurice were quickly surrounded by members of the local reception committee and escorted to the office of Admiral Lattimer, commandant of the navy yard. Later the party proceeded to City Hall.

Owing to the rain the public reception in the huge stadium at the sesqui-centennial grounds this afternoon was called off and instead the fliers were to greet the people of Philadelphia through the radio, using Station WCAU for that purpose.

CONFESSES ALTERING VOTES

The landslide that has rushed down on ballot-cheating in Pittsburgh spread to new boundaries in Criminal Court today when an election official, a young man of 22, confessed his guilt and cleared four others scheduled to go to trial with him.

Jack McKenzie, a member of the board in the Eighteenth District, Third Ward, pleaded guilty to wilfully performing his duties so as to defeat the object of the election laws.

He was sentenced to serve six months in jail.

McKenzie told Judge Harry H. Rowand he had called off the ballots to his colleagues improperly and when the other vote-counters had departed had altered them with erasures and additions to make them conform with the return sheets. All this he did, he confessed, because he thought the candidates he favored were "good men"—an explanation that brought a laugh from spectators.

With McKenzie's confession the charges against the other four officials of the Hill district ward were dropped. They were Sam Neaman, David Fineberg, Harry Fineberg and Jacob Rosenberg. Thus, they are free after, on Monday, offering pleas of no defense to one count in the indictment, pleas that were refused by the court.

"Is there," Judge Rowand quizzed as McKenzie pleaded, "any agreement among you for McKenzie to take the blame so that the others may escape?"

All five chorused a decisive "no."

Norris' Showing Best on Little Money---Will

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., May 9.—They examined some of the presidential candidates yesterday to see what they had spent on their campaigns. Norris made the best showing and he had only spent $6 for an ad in a country newspaper and has the Wisconsin and Nebraska delegations to show for it. Which proves that cheap advertising pays. Goff has spent $90.00, but received nothing definite so far. George, of Georgia has spent $100.00 and has Georgia that's about $4.00 a delegate. Walsh receipts were $1,075.00 and expenditures $1,090.65, so he is in the "red" $15.65. Curtis spent $11,000. It costs money to get William White and his gang to vote for anybody. Now none of these men have spent much, but on the other hand they haven't got far. So it just shows you can't get something for nothing.

—WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, JR., manufacturer, born in Philadelphia, September 30, 1861; educated in the public schools. After association in business with his father he went to Chicago in 1891 and embarked in the manufacture of chewing gum for which he is internationally famous. Is a director in many financial and development enterprises. Lives in Chicago.

In my opinion, Pittsburgh is in a class by itself.

I first saw Pittsburgh when a schoolboy and remember at that time they called Pittsburgh at night—"Hell with the lid off." Presume that expression has been out of date for many years.

The name Pittsburgh to me has always meant the same when it came to business as AAA-1 Bradstreet rating behind the name of a business firm. Pittsburgh is and always will be a business center.

(From letters collected by Roy Jansen, of Pittsburgh.)

FAR APART ON CHURCH REPORT

Inquiries among officials of the United Mine Workers and to executives of local coal companies disclosed today that the strikers consider the report of the Federal Council of Churches on the bituminous situation on the whole a fair presentation of the subject, while the operators are dissatisfied with it.

The strikers are willing to comply in the main with the council's recommendations, but the operators with few exceptions adhere to their intention to have no further dealings with the union.

Here are some of the opinions expressed:

PHILIP MURRAY, international vice president of the United Mine Workers—Taking it by and large, it is not a bad report. We are willing, as recommended, to abandon any spirit of belligerency and, without malice, to meet the operators in joint conference and let reason and logic work out a solution. We are willing to go into such a conference free from commitment. The first thing to do is to make a wage agreement, but the mere making of a wage agreement will not settle this thing. There must be erected a regulatory superstructure to stabilize the industry. We would be glad to join with the operators in working for remedial legislation.

C. E. LESHER, executive vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company—The report on the whole is a very beautiful job of writing on both sides of the question. It is almost 100 per cent both ways. We intend to do nothing about it. There is nothing that can be done. We are not prepared to reconsider our decision to conduct no negotiations with the United Mine Workers.

HORACE F. BAKER, president of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation—I talked to Dr. Arthur E. Suffern, the economist employed by the Federal Council of Churches, while he was here making his investigation and gave him such information as he requested. He seemed desirous of getting data representing the operators' viewpoint, and I furnished him the material, but I have not seen the report. In regard to the council's suggestion that the operators make an agreement with the unions I will only say that the economic distress of the industry is totally unrelated to the subject of collective bargaining. If we were to make an agreement today it would have no effect on the economic problem involved. The question as to whether we operate on a union or nonunion basis has no bearing on the matter of overproduction.

M. C. ANGLOCH, president of the Vesta Coal Company, a subsidiary of the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation—I don't think the compilers of the report thoroughly understood all of the matters that they discussed. Take their references to the houses built by the coal companies as dwellings for the miners. If the companies did not build these houses, who would? The houses are not built for the purpose of making money by renting them. They are treated as plant equipment. I think the report deserves study, and I want to read it several times. But we are through with the United Mine Workers for all time.

B. H. CANON, general manager of the Clinton Block Coal Company and last president of the now defunct Pittsburgh Coal Producers' Association—The report is a fairly complete review of the situation, but in my opinion will have no effect on the industry. We are going to continue to run open shop.

JOHN H. JONES, president of the Bertha Consumers' Company—I have just skimmed the report so far and am hardly in position to give an intelligent opinion of it. I have always believed in collective bargaining and am still in favor of it, provided some way can be found by which disputes can be settled otherwise than by strikes.

10,000 Parade -:- MOORE BRIDGE DEDICATED -:- Knoxville Gay

CUTS RIBBON

Margaret Moore, aged 5, daughter of Judge George V. Moore, cut the ribbon that opened the John P. Moore Memorial Bridge, Knoxville, to traffic last night. The bridge was named after her grandfather, the late county controller.

SPEAKERS

The county commissioners of Allegheny County turned the bridge over to the residents of the community at the services last night. Those in the photograph are former Commissioner James Houlahen and Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong, E. V. Babcock and Charles C. McGovern. They are seen with Miss Marie Brackman (left) and Miss Madalin Brackman, aides to little Miss Moore.

PARADE

Eight hundred school children from the schools of the Thirtieth Ward carried American flags in the parade that preceded the services at the bridge. The parade passed through the streets of the district and then to the bridge. The children took part in presenting the musical program on the span. Here is shown a section of the dense crowd.

BOY SCOUTS

Several troops of Boy Scouts marched with the school children and war veterans and many automobiles and floats as well a shundreds of marchers. H. Benjamin Lutton was marshal of the parade. Ten thousand persons participated in the parade.

FORD GETS HORSECAR RELIC

NEW YORK, May 8.—(INS.)—Wheels stilled for 40 years turned creakingly yesterday as before a crowd of 1,500 in Brooklyn, Henry Ford received a venerable relic—the last of Brooklyn's old horse trolleys—for his "museum of America."

The trolley was cleared of a vast quantity of dust and then presented to the automobile manufacturer by H. H. Porter, president of the Brooklyn City R. R.

Ford drove it for 40 feet and then expressed himself as satisfied.

The car, a relic of the days of 1868, will be shipped to Dearborn, Mich., and placed in the Ford museum for transportation relics at that place.

Ford and his son, Edsel, arrived at the offices of the railroad company. After a brief and informal reception in the offices, they started by automobile for the car barns. The party was accompanied by a police motorcycle escort.

"I have heard it said, Mr. Ford, that you are the man who made walking a pleasure," said Porter in his presentation address. "I now take exception to that statement. Long before the days of the model T this old vehicle made walking, running and swimming a joy. But the old car served its useful purpose and has since been superceded by more modern transportation equipment."

CHINESE BOYS INDICTED ON LETTER COMPLAINT

CAPT. T. E. CLARK, SHIPBUILDER, SUCCUMBS

Capt. Thomas E. Clark, 70, president for 10 years of the Allegheny River Improvement Association, died at his home 475 Orchard avenue, Bellevue, yesterday after a short illness. In 1885 Capt. Clark entered the boat building industry and a short time later established a firm of steam engine builders which later was merged with the Pittsburgh Valve, Foundry & Construction Company. In 1901 he built a stern wheel steamboat at West Hickory, the first of its kind to come down the Allegheny River in more than 25 years.

Capt. Clark established the Marine Manufacturing & Supply Company in 1901 and was its president.

He served four terms as school director of the old First Ward Allegheny City and served in the same capacity for five years in Bellevue.

He was a member of the Pittsburgh Coal Exchange, Franklin Lodge No. 221, F. and A. M.; Duquesne Chapter No. 25, Royal Arch Masons; Pittsburgh Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar; Syria Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., and the Methodist Protestant Church of Bellevue. He also was an honorary member of Local No. 10, Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association.

PITTSBURGHER HURT IN WRECK

HAZLETON, Pa., May 9.—(AP.)—Harry Cunius, 45, motorman on the Wilkes-Barre and Hazleton Railway, was killed and 24 passengers—including T. W. Webb, Georgian apartments, Pittsburgh—were injured in a head-on collision between two high-speed electric trains at St. Johns, nine miles north of this city yesterday afternoon. Webb was only slightly hurt.

The wreck is said to have been due to Cunius overrunning a switch.

The motorman, pinned in his cab, was burned while a score of workers tried in vain to reach him through the flames.

T. W. Webb, 25, traveling for the credit department of Speer & Co., Pittsburgh, telegraphed his mother at her home in the Georgian apartments, Ellsworth avenue, today that he was only slightly hurt and was on his way to Pittsburgh.

Intestinal Stasis

. . . What is it
. . . Why do we have it
. . . How can we prevent it

ALWAYS tired? Irritable? Get awful headaches? Constipated a lot? Beware! . . . INTESTINAL STASIS . . . take the Zilatone Treatment.

Intestinal stasis means your intestines are asleep on the job. They aren't properly digesting and eliminating waste matter. Poisons are spreading through the system—making you dull—sapping your strength. Doctors say intestinal stasis is a common cause of premature old age, auto-intoxication, heart and kidney troubles, high blood pressure, gall stones, etc.

But Zilatone, as this new scientific treatment is called, ends intestinal stasis—safely, naturally. By stimulating a natural flow of bile, it wakes up the whole digestive system—sweeps away poisons. Not just a laxative—Zilatone tones and builds up the whole body. Produces a wonderful feeling of general well-being.

Thousands have used Zilatone with marked benefits. Doctors recommend it. Contains no habit-forming ingredients. Only elements Nature herself employs to keep body healthy. Get Zilatone today. Only 60c. Money back if not satisfied

Zilatone is recommended and sold in this city by all May's Drug Stores and other live druggists.

A special dish this week on the menu of all Pennsylvania Dining Cars.

Braised sirloin of beef with mushrooms . .

This week on Pennsylvania Diners

AND what a dish it is! The finest beef this country produces. The tenderest, freshest, full-bodied cuts. Quick-roasted in a hot oven to seal in all its savory juices—slow-roasted to awaken the last, most delicate, juicy flavor.

And served with a sauce concocted according to a recipe which the chefs are selfish enough to guard carefully—a sauce of celery and carrots and dainty young onions, of pepper corn and bay leaf and tomatoes, of beef bones and beef gravy and fresh plump mushrooms!

It simply beggars description.

So it is that Braised Sirloin of Beef with Mushrooms has become famous as an example par excellence of Pennsylvania Dining Car cookery.

Not only superlative in itself, it stands as a symbol of the whole cuisine. For people argue rightly that chefs who are skilful enough to create one masterpiece may be depended upon to make many other things similarly delectable.

Try it—on all Pennsylvania Dining Cars this week—Braised Sirloin of Beef, Pennsylvania!

THE BEST PLACE TO SHOP AFTER ALL

TANK BURSTS, SPEWS FLOOD

DELUGE WRECKS HOME, SWEEPS 2 GARAGES

Two garages were demolished and two homes damaged, when a 200,000-gallon steel tank at Rising Main and Denham streets, North Side, burst last night. Streets in the Fineview district were inundated as the waters rushed into the valley.

City Council had been warned repeatedly of the tank's weakness by an official of the water bureau.

The first floor of the two-story frame building at 33 Denham street, which caught the full force of the water after two garages in the rear had been demolished, was wrecked. The second floor was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schoerner and four children, Walter, Elizabeth, Margaret and Heinz.

Herman Hartman and wife, occupants of the first floor, were in the kitchen when, with a low rumble, the tank let go. The rear wall of the kitchen was pushed in and water swept through the kitchen, into the hall and out the front door. In a flash the water rose to a height of several feet, then subsided as quickly as it rose, and left the walls and floors covered with slime.

The home of James Skiles, 31 Denham street, also was slightly damaged when a piece of steel struck it.

Two tanks, each about 20 feet high by 25 feet in diameter furnished pressure to the upper North Side district. Both are old, and an examination of the tank which let go showed it was rusted almost through. The water pressure is believed to have caused the tank to burst. It was repaired two weeks ago, several new plates being inserted. The second tank was damaged by the bursting of the first tank and was drained.

E. E. Lanpher, managing engineer in the Bureau of Water, said today that the broken tank would not be repaired, but that it would be replaced by the new McNaugher reservoir in Lafayette avenue, which is expected to be completed within eight weeks. Lanpher said the tank which failed supplied about 50,000 homes and that none of these had been without water because of the break.

ALLEGED "DOPE" SELLER FACES MANY CHARGES

Federal charges under the Harrison narcotic act continue to pile up against William Schreiner, alias William Campbell, alias "Big Willie," an alleged drug peddler and addict. He is scheduled to go on trial next week on a conspiracy charge, alleging an attempt to smuggle morphine into the county jail in February. Monday night he was arrested by U. S. narcotic agents when he was alleged to have sold morphine to an operative. Yesterday the Federal grand jury returned an indictment charging Schreiner with forging a prescription for morphine.

CREDO CLUB TOLD OF U. S. MINT OPERATION

Uncle Sam made a profit of $8,000,000 on small coins turned out by the mints last year. Prof. Montford Jones, of the University of Pittsburgh faculty, said yesterday in an address before the members of the Credo Club of the Credit Association of Western Pennsylvania, in the Chamber of Commerce. He said that 75 cents worth of nickel produces nickels worth $4.50. Prof. Jones' talk dealt principally with the operation of the United States Mint. He was a member of the committee which recently helped to count the government's billions of gold. Prof. Jones is a member of the banking committee of the National Association of Credit Men.

EAST END FIRE LOSS $5,000

The two-story building of the East Liberty Transfer & Express Company, 6346 Frankstown avenue, was destroyed late yesterday by fire that also damaged two adjoining buildings. Damage was estimated at $20,000 by W. M. Connors, owner. In addition five automobiles and household goods were destroyed. The origin is undetermined.

The poultry shop of William Brown, 6342 Frankstown avenue, and the barber shop of J. Luther, 6344 Frankstown avenue, were damaged slightly. Traffic was tied up in Frankstown avenue for more than two hours. Fire Chief Fred S. Beckett said the damage would not exceed $5,000.

SUN-TELE PHOTO UNITES FAMILY

The holdup of Ralph Woodring, taxi driver, of 529 Collins avenue, will re-unite him with his grandfather, D. P. Woodring, of Port Matilda, Pa., whom he has not seen for 18 years.

A Sun-Telegraph photograph was the medium through which the elder Woodring learned of the whereabouts of his grandson, for whom he had conducted a search for 10 years.

Last Friday night Woodring was held up and three hours later the alleged robber, Addison Hake, 22, of 709 North Lang avenue, was arrested. Photographs of Woodring and Hake were published in Sunday's Sun-Telegraph and D. P. Woodring of Port Matilda wrote to this newspaper asking for further information.

Ralph Woodring and his brother, Jerome, reside with their mother, Mrs. Alfonso Stevenson, in Collins avenue. His parents are divorced and he has not seen his father for several years.

DRY VIOLATORS SENTENCED

Ignatz Siapaneske of O'Hara township, convicted in the Federal district court of manufacturing and possessing moonshine whisky, yesterday was sentenced three months to jail by Judge R. M. Gibson. Steve Varga and Vincent Argill were each ordered to serve 30 days in jail and pay $200 fines, when they pleaded guilty of violating the prohibition law. Other violators of the prohibition law were fined as follows: Godlie Hershman and Peter Sriolorich, $500 each; William Easton, $400, and George Boirk, $200.

The grand jury returned true bills charging Fred J. Heisel, Jack Seminatore, Rudolph Dieck, Rudolph Weber and Joseph Stock with violating the national prohibition law.

FUMIGANT GAS KILLS WOMAN

Entering a fumigated room in a house she had rented at 239 Meyran avenue, last night, Mrs. Elizabeth Hoffman, 42, of 3508 Cable place, was asphyxiated. The woman had been warned against entering the room until poisonous gases had dissipated, but she was desirous of cleaning the room immediately, police reported.

It is believed the woman had entered the room, meaning to open the windows. She was found on the porch of the house where she had staggered after being overcome.

Druggist Duped by "Purchaser" of Store

Walter Smith, proprietor of a drugstore at First street and Grant avenue, Duquesne, notified county detectives yesterday that he had advanced $100 to a man posing as "Dr. Robert Wray," of Atlantic City, who had tendered a check for $9,000 to purchase the store. Smith said he found the check was worthless and that "Dr. Wray" was not known by the bank on which it was drawn.

CORONER WILL REPORT ON DEATH AT MAYVIEW

Charlie Chaplin Soon to Star In New Drama, "The Blind Girl," With Merna Kennedy as Heroine

By REGINA CREWE.

(Copyright 1928, King Features Syndicate.)

LOS ANGELES, May 9.

UNLESS Charlie Chaplin develops a floor-pacing fit and suddenly declares that by-this-and-by-that he will evolve his next picture from some one of the wild ideas which are his pets, his unit will begin very shortly on a story called "The Blind Girl." This, of course, will be only the temporary or "working" title. Final names are chosen only after many conferences as to what words will bring most shekels to the box office. "The Circus" was a working title. But between one thing and another it became firmly established in peoples' minds during a two-year period. Thus it was deemed wisest to retain the name when the film was finally shown to the public.

"The Blind Girl" role is to be played by red-headed Merna Kennedy, and the story is built almost entirely around Merna and Charlie. There will be no leading man. Harry Crocker, Charlie's millionaire pal who played the tight-rope walker in "The Circus," will exercise his movie hobby by helping Chaplin with production problems. This will be Merna's second picture in three years, and she is rarin' to go. Merna wants to make movies, and her Chaplin contract does not allow her to work except with him. Merna and Jimmy Hall are still "going together," and seem as much in love as ever. Jimmy is awfully tired of working on "Hell's Angels," which seems to move so slowly, and is buoyed up by the change of a brief vacation during which he will play in another film on the old-home Paramount lot.

It was interesting to watch the bevy of stars, who attended the premiere of "The Good-Bye Kiss," rise to take a bow when they were introduced to the audience. And more interesting still to note that the wildest applause greeted Louise Fazenda and—guess who?—Ben Turpin! The sheiks and the beauties had to be content with a stifled round or two, while Louise and Ben brought down the house. People love to laugh, and this was a pretty tribute to two comedians who have created enough merriment to rock the world.

Despite the efforts of the local boys to let the picture down easy, "The Good-Bye Kiss" is quite as bad as any the present season has brought to light. It is stupid and vulgar, and will do a lot toward destroying the Mack Sennett myth. As a matter of fact many players and directors who are graduates from the Sennett lot declare that in "the good old days," no one knew just what it was all about. If any of the boys conceived an idea which he thought was good, he just up and shot it. But in these days of million-dollar movies the public is more discriminating. Mack may still be able to make two-reelers—but after this "epic" he should be epicured.

It may interest Mr. Penny, Mary Duncan's distant admirer, and a few thousand other folk, to learn that "Poppy" of "The Shanghai Gesture" fame, is quite as much of a film sensation as she was on the stage. Mary has had some great breaks, which, plus her own ability, have started her well along the movie way to stardom. Miss Duncan had her chance with Murnau in "Four Devils," and now has another film director in Frank Borzage, who will make "Backwash." "Backwash" is the new title for "The River," and isn't intended to intimate anything of comedy, or to suggest soap.

As readers know, the guess that put Lane Chandler and Leslie Fenton with Gary Cooper in "The First Kiss" was correct. Lane went along in an undistinguished manner for some time, and then suddenly proved how good he is as one of the "rootin', tootin' galloots who wants to die in his high ton boots." The picture being "The Legion of the Condemned." Properly cast Lane will keep going up. And Leslie Fenton proved the same to be true of him through his characterization in "The Show Down." The original name for "The First Kiss" was "The Four Brothers," and as Gary, Leslie and Lane make only three, there must be another one. Let's make a guess that the fourth brother will be Gardner James.

EARL L. CRABB

Mr. Crabb, recently appointed general manager of all Stanley theaters in Western Pennsylvania, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, has taken up his duties here.

Film Script Clerk Now Playing Star Roles

Alice White, who not so long ago was working in the capacity of a script clerk for First National Pictures, Inc., in California, is announced as a new star of that company, having been promoted from the ranks of its featured players.

The initial vehicles under which she will be starred are "Show Girl," from the novel by J. P. McEvoy; "Bluffers," by Robert S. Carr, 18-year-old school boy author; "Rosie of the Ritz," an original story by Charles Beahan and Garrett Fort, and "On the Air," from the book of radio short stories by Paul Deresco Augsburg.

EUGENE HOWARD

Mr. Howard is one half of the team of Willie and Eugene Howard, headliners of the Jubilee Week stage presentation in the Stanley. They are two of the best known comedians of the vaudeville and musical comedy stage.

NEW EXECUTIVE IN CHARGE

The campaign inaugurated by the Stanley Company of America in celebrating its first Stanley theaters jubilee week had its inception with the arrival of Earl L. Crabb, the newly appointed general manager of all the Stanley theaters in Western Pennsylvania.

For 27 years Mr. Crabb has been catering to public taste and wishes for entertainment, and it is said he has the knack of being able to arrange the type of motion pictures and stage features that the majority enjoys.

He was born in Richmond, Ind., and at the age of 17 entered the amusement business as an employe of Moe Mark, who operated the Penny Arcade, of which he became manager six months later. He held the post for six years. In 1906 he opened the first motion picture theater in Fort Wayne, Ind. Here he introduced talking pictures, employing five persons who followed the dialogue of the screen players on the silver sheet. Its success proved to Crabb that new ideas could be added to picture entertainment, so a short time later he opened a second theater.

Three years afterward he sold his theater holdings in Fort Wayne and joined Carl Laemmle, president of Universal Pictures Corporation in the capacity of contact man with prospective theater owners who were familiar with theater operation and method of procedure in properly arranging for the erection of a theater, attractions, etc. While heading this Universal service department, Mr. Crabb managed the Casino Theater in Chicago and supervises four other Universal theaters in the same city.

In 1906 he left Universal to return to the Moe Mark banner, and became manager of the Strand Theater in Buffalo. Later Mr. Crabb returned to Universal in the capacity of general manager of all the Universal-operated theaters throughout the United States.

In Syracuse was the Palace Theater. Four corporations lost everything they invested in it. It was regarded as a hoodoo house, but in 1923 Mr. Crabb took over the Palace and went to work. Three years later he sold the Palace at a profit, twice the original sum of construction investment. Following this he was appointed district manager of all the Paramount-Publix Theater holdings and interests in Texas, where his record of achievement led to his appointment as managing director of Paramount's newest and finest theater in Boston, the Metropolitan, which cost $4,000,000.

Then the Keith-Albee circuit appointed him general manager of all of its interests in Boston and in complete charge of the construction of the B. F. Keith Memorial Theater.

Several months ago Mr. Crabb became associated with the Stanley Company of America. Recently he was chosen general manager of the Stanley Company interests in Western Pennsylvania, with headquarters in Pittsburgh. His first official act was to appoint Ab. S. Davis managing director of all Stanley-operated theaters in Western Pennsylvania. Mr. Davis was associated with Rowland & Clark, and since the amalgamation he has been with the Stanley-Davis-Clark Corporation.

COMEDY, FILMS IN BILLS

Beginning next Monday night the Alvin will play for a brief engagement Cecil B. DeMille's photoplay, "The King of Kings," which visualizes the last two years of Christ's life on earth. After Monday there will be two shows daily. The seat sale opens tomorrow.

Brennan and Rogers, featured in many musical comedies and big revues, will be the headline attraction in the Keith-Albee vaudeville program next week. One is a comedy female impersonator. The photoplay will be "Why Sailors Go Wrong."

VOTE MACHINE EXPLAINED TO REALTORS

"The voting machine will give an honest election count. It will not eliminate fraud, but it will cut out many opportunities for dishonesty. It is a thing outside of politics, and all good citizens should organize and demand it at the election next fall." These were the declarations of Senator Frank J. Harris speaking yesterday to the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board in the William Penn Hotel.

Two amendments, No. 6 and No. 13, will come up this fall for the approval of the voters, Senator Harris pointed out. The former will make larger election districts possible so that the voting machine may be used to good advantage, and the second will permit the use of the machine throughout the state.

The machines will be paid for out of the savings made in reduced printing bills and the consolidation of as many as three of the present voting districts. The machines operate with great speed, requiring but 30 seconds to vote a straight ticket.

SPEED IN TABULATION

Imperfect ballots are eliminated, as it is impossible to vote for more than the proper number of candidates.

While no general campaign has been conducted in Pennsylvania for the voting machines, Senator Harris says that public sentiment is strongly in favor of them. He said that this sentiment includes many of the political leaders who have become weary of election bickerings and criminal prosecutions.

New York state now has the machine in general use. It is being used in the Tammany districts of New York City, and has been successful in cleaning up election conditions there, he said.

A small model of the machine was demonstrated for the realtors. A larger machine will be used in the election at the Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The Real Estate Board gave Senator Harris a rising vote of thanks for his address.

REAL ESTATE

The University of Pittsburgh has sold through the Commonwealth Real Estate Company, to individual buyers nine properties in Madison avenue, Peralta and Suismon streets and Lovett way, North Side for a total consideration of $19,937. These are former Darlington estate properties. The buyers are Annie S. Christian, Samuel Rasculla, Albert Varga, Margaret H. Brunovsky, Theresa Dosch, John Techman, George L. Schmidt, John Ross and Helen Grimpe.

Lieut. Arthur Gavin and Zeus Soucek, both of the U. S. Navy, remained in the air over Philadelphia more than 30 hours to break the endurance flight record for seaplanes.

A three-story brick apartment at Lafayette avenue and Osgood street, North Side, has been sold for Christ Dimling, to William Dellanbaugh, for $19,500. The lot is 80x120 feet. Horner & Daubenspeck are the brokers.

A brick dwelling at 1865 Penn avenue, Second Ward, lot 13x66 feet, has been sold by Ida D. Kearns to Samuel Berman.

In Forest Hills, the Freehold Real Estate Company sold for the East Wilkinsburg Improvement Company, to Philip Hale, one lot in Fairfax road and one lot in Cascade road. The buyer will build two houses.

What Radio Shall I Buy???

THIS is a question that is confronting thousands of purchasers daily. Quite a serious and reasonable question to ask because so many radio sets have such poor quality of tone. There are four essential points to consider: First, a fine quality of tone; Second, sensitive selectivity (to cut out local stations); Third, good volume so you can hear distant stations clearly; Fourth, the set you purchase should be constructed to bring in far away stations. Inasmuch as a radio receiver today is a vital part of home life, the set you purchase should have the above qualifications. The ZENITH RADIO CORPORATION have incorporated the above four essentials into every ZENITH Radio, and before you purchase a radio set see that your local dealer demonstrates a ZENITH alongside of any set you have in mind. After the demonstration is over you will want a ZENITH Radio receiver to remain in your home as a permanent fixture, because the quality goes in before the name goes on.

LOCAL MAN FEELS YEARS YOUNGER

Undergoes Big Change When Ten Herbs Benefits Stomach, Liver and Kidneys.

"Since taking Ten Herbs, I am a different person and feel years younger," was the statement of Mr. Henry Reber, 315 Seward Street, Duquesne Heights, Pittsburgh, to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's

MR. HENRY REBER

Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this new herbal medicine. "Although I am only a little past 50, I have been declining in health for several years," continued Mr. Reber, who is an electrician.

"My stomach was so badly disordered, I had to be careful what I ate—anything greasy put me in misery. Nearly all foods disagreed with me. Gas would form and I would feel full and bloated. I was constipated all the time and used physics continually. My liver was sluggish, and I seemed to fill with bile. I had dizzy spells and felt drowsy, and had no ambition or energy. My kidneys seemed to cause the pains in my back, and if I stooped over I could hardly straighten up. I slept poorly, as I was getting more or less nervous.

"I was beginning to feel years older than my age, when a friend told me about Ten Herbs. I started taking it, and am now on my fourth bottle. I have a fine appetite and can eat almost anything without trouble afterwards—no more gas or bloating. My bowels are regular, and my liver and kidneys are working the way Nature meant them to. The The bilious and dizzy spells have left me, and my skin has cleared. I arise in the morning feeling full of vim and vigor and ready for the day's work, and the pains are gone from my back. Ten Herbs gave me such splendid results that I am certainly glad to add my name to the list of people who have publicly recommended your medicine."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. He will be glad to tell you how to take it to get the best results. Free sample given.

"CUT-IN" DRIVER BRANDED MENACE TO SAFETY

ACTIONS BOOST CRASH RISKS 50 TO 1

The automobile driver who makes a practice of cutting out of line in traffic, nosing ahead of the next car, slipping through a hole, plunging ahead and weaving through the next group of motor cars, is responsible for a growing number of accidents which come under the classification of preventable, states Inspector Ben Marshall of the traffic police.

"Not only is his chance of an accident to the one car increased about 50 to 1, as a survey of 10,000 automobile accident cases has shown, but the possibility of causing others to become involved in driving accidents also is greatly increased," continued Inspector Marshall.

"I don't mean that a driver should never cut his car out of line. That would be ridiculous advice. It is constantly necessary to pull a car out of line. The purpose may be to turn or to pass another car. Circumstances may make it right and proper to do so.

"What I mean is that you increase your chances of accident 50 to 1 when you cut out of line. Therefore, you should do so only with greatest foresight and care.

"With all the motorists and operators obeying the traffic rules and suggestions, there would be less necessity for cutting out of line. When planning to make a right turn the operator should keep to the right of the road, and a motorist planning a left turn should advance to the right center of the road at the intersection where he plans his turn.

"When the operators of all slow-moving vehicles have been educated to keep religiously to the right of the road, except when absolutely necessary that they turn out, there will be little possibility of collisions."

36 CARS ENTER 500 MI. RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 9.—Thirty-six cars, the choice array of speed creations of the world, have been entered in the sixteenth international 500-mile race to be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway May 30.

Two of the mounts are of French design, one to be driven by a Rumanian nobleman, Prince Ghica, the other by an American pilot, D. K. "Shorty" Cantion.

The entries closed at midnight, May 1, and a Marmon Special, entered by the Cooper Engineering Company, was the last car to be included in the lists. It was handed to T. E. "Pop" Meyers, general manager of the Indianapolis track, by Earl Cooper, captain of the Marmon team, just 60 seconds before it was too late, to satisfy the superstitious whim of the mechanics who are preparing the car for the contest. There is a racing tradition that the last car entered in the race will be the first one home at the end of the event.

"I'm not superstitious," smiled Cooper in handing in the belated entry, "but if it will make the mechanics any happier I'm for it." Post entries never have been received for the Indianapolis race.

Two previous winners, Peter De Paolo, nephew of Ralph De Palma, who established the track record of 101.13 miles an hour for the 500 miles in 1925, and George Souders, Purdue University undergraduate, who won last year, will drive. Tommy Milton, only two-time winner of an international 500-mile race, is preparing a mount for Cliff Durant, multimillionaire sportsman, who has a penchant for driving fast automobiles.

Norman Batten, who bravely drove his flaming car down the home stretch in last year's race, and Henry Kohlert, St. Charles, Ill., garage owner, who was severely injured in last year's event, are both entered in the contest.

Thirty-three cars are permitted to start in the race, according to the American Automobile Association, under whose rules and sanction the race is held. This means that the 33 fastest cars of the 36, decided in qualifying trials of 10 miles each, will face the starter on the day of the race.

WOULD HOUSE 4,000 AUTOS

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 9.—Solution of the downtown parking problem—long sought as a traffic relief measure and as a means by which downtown merchants might meet losses of trade due to parking restrictions and greater conveniences for motoring shoppers in outlying districts—is believed to be brought nearer by a plan for a parking garage to cost $4,000,000 to $5,000,000, to be centrally located and to have capacity of 4,000 automobiles.

The proposed parking fee will be based on length of time that the car remains in the garage, probably five cents an hour. It is believed this rate can be made if costs of financing the building can be kept to a minimum by stock subscriptions from the great stores most interested in the project.

Tentative plans are drawn, but these are likely to be amended because of desirability of adding an automatic system to carry the car to its assigned parking stall and return it when the motorist calls for it.

The first plans called for a ramp garage, the driver or an attendant to drive the car up to where the car is to left.

The garage, according to present specifications, would cover an entire block in the very heart of the downtown section. It would consist of 12 floors, 10 above and two below the surface, and would be equipped with an airplane landing across its top.

Entrances the width of a street would approach the building on all four sides.

A belt of some 50 or 60 stores would be operated on the street floor, backers of the proposed project have indicated.

CANADIAN PARKS TO OFFER GOOD ROADS

CALGARY, Alta., May 9.—Announcement is made that approximately 275 miles of good highways will be open for travel in the Canadian national parks this summer.

'CURING' STRAY WIRE EVIL

A single stray strand of wire may produce a ground which will stall the engine. A preventive measure is to use terminals, but sometimes terminals break off, or it is necessary to put in a new wire without waiting to attach terminals. In either of these instances there is a chance that a single strand will become loose and cause a ground. There is an easy way out of this difficulty, however. Simply bare two or three inches of the end of the wire, loop it and twist it, and then tape all the bare metal except the loop itself.

AVERAGE MOTORIST USED 550 GALS. GAS

Each mortist in the United States during 1927 used an average of 550.9 gallons of gasoline and traveled an average of 7,437 miles. The averages are based on a total gasoline consumption amounting to 11,562,190,000 gallons. The mileage traveled is based on an average of 13.5 miles per gallon of gasoline. Using this figure, the total number of miles traveled by the 20,991,333 cars and trucks during 1927 is 1,561,071,150,000.

7 STATES REQUIRE SAFETY TEACHING

Teaching of safety or traffic regulations in the public schools is required in seven states and there is an ever-increasing sentiment to make this work a part of school studies throughout the country, according to the American Automobile Association. States which have laws upon this subject are New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Wisconsin and Wyoming.

TIRES AT BEST ON PAVING

AKRON, O., May 9.—Demonstrations in actual service proved that tires wear 700 per cent better on paved than gravel roads. Tire test cars in Texas during the winter months tested tires on both paved and gravel roads in order to learn first hand the difference in tire tread wear on highways in various stages of improvement, it was learned here.

PISTONS NOW THIRD OF FORMER WEIGHT

Pistons are now being made for motor cars, of less than one-third the weight of those previously used.

SPAN ROAD RUTS WITH METAL

MILWAUKEE, May 9.—A development of this spring season of sink holes, frost boils and bottomless roads is the metal rut. This is being used by various county highway departments to span otherwise impassable spots on the roads and keep traffic moving.

Use of such contrivances is quite in contrast with the old idea that highway maintenance was a fair weather job, to be given up as hopeless when snow and the spring break-up took possession of the ways of travel.

Use of steel troughs was tried with success to maintain traffic at bad spots on Highways 12 and 16 near Mauston. Fond du Lac county highway commission also used 40 feet of the metal forms at a bad break in the road near the Oak Center School. In a number of counties planks are laid down to smooth ways for the slow passage of cars over soft spots.

MOTORS NEED TONIC IN SPRING

"ILLS" AVERTED BY OVERHAUL

Your car's motor needs a spring tonic just the same as you do.

You take your heavy underwear off in the spring. Take your motor's off, too.

These are two bits of advice from automobile designers and builders in Detroit.

Throughout the winter we have been driving our cars with our generators tuned up to a higher rate of charge. This is necessary then when the cold weather reduces the temperature of the acid in our battery and when we are drawing more severely on it for starting and for lighting. The drain on the batteries during the winter months is far heavier than in summer. Hence more of a charge is needed and the brushes of the generator are set up to charge heavier.

"But when spring comes, our cars start easier. Not half the current is needed when we step on the starter, for the cars start with far less spinning than in winter. Then, too, as the days are longer, we burn our lights far less, thus cutting down on the drain on the battery to a considerable extent.

"So, when spring comes, much expense and trouble can be saved by taking the car to a service station and having the electrical equipment overhauled. The service station will cut down the charging rate of the generator, check up the electric wiring, clean the contact points of the distributor, adjust the timing and check the thermostat."

All this can be saved through a proper adjustment.

Then, too, the timing should be looked after. If through any chance it has gotten out of adjustment the consequent overheating of the motor might not be noticed under winter driving conditions when climatic conditions serve to cool the engine. But when warm weather comes, and all the mechanical equipment is needed to keep the motor cool, these things stand out. The timing is "slow" and the motor heats up. If not noticed in time it is likely to result in burned-out bearings.

ALONG AUTO ROW

By H. W. DIETRICH,
Automobile Editor.

FOR BETTER DRIVERS

Senator W. J. Morgan, a Newark, N. J., automobile dealer, is advocating that in the future candidates for automobile operators licenses be required to prove that they are of good character. He believes that such a test will raise the driving standard.

"It has been very patent in the last 10 years," Senator Morgan says, "that crime and the motor have been very closely associated. In almost every crime, where murder and robbery has been the motive, the motor car has played a very important part. Recently four souls were hurled into eternity at Trenton. They used a motor car in the murder and robbery of a Newark concern's cashier. There should be a divorce between the motor car and crime and that divorce can be brought about by state's refusing drivers' as well as car licenses to people that have been convicted of crime more than once. All states should demand a character reference rather than demand that a person must read and write before receiving a driver's license. It will not be hard to trace a character references, even if the driver's application is held up while the effort is being made. We would have lost some very valuable citizens of the United States if, before receiving citizenship papers, a reading and writing qualification had been demanded. I have seen better drivers of cars who couldn't read or write than many who could, even if those that cannot read and write be in the extreme minority."

ELIMINATING DETOURS

Because of the many detours that have been placed or are contemplated on roads in this district, motorists here are discussing with interest a bill that soon will be presented to the Legislature of Texas. Under this proposed bill long detours would be abolished. Contractors would have to figure in the cost of a satisfactory detour with their bid for construction.

NAMES ASSISTANT

H. M. Stephens, general sales manager of the Cadillac Motor Car Company, has appointed Maj. H. J. Cupper as an assistant, information from Detroit says. Maj. Cupper joins the Cadillac Company after serving five years with the sales section of General Motors in charge of sales activities under B. G. Koether, director of the sales section.

HEADS DODGE SALES

Dodge Senior Six sales have been placed under the direct supervision of Henry Krohn, vice president, Frank D. Saupp, Inc., distributor here, has been informed. The announcement from Detroit also states that Rex Glasson has been appointed sales promotion manager for Dodge.

BUSINESS GOOD

Herbert Hoover's recent statement that business conditions are "distinctly better" was upheld by reports of all branch managers of the Durant Motor Company, at a sales conference a week ago at the Elizabeth, N. J., plant of the Durant organization. These men, from every section of the country, reported business conditions as good. "When it comes to business conditions, salesmen as a rule are a pessimistic lot," says T. S. Johnston, assistant to W. C. Durant, "and when they admit that business is good, it is safe to assume that conditions are excellent."

AMERICAN TIRES FAVORED

That American automobile tires are gaining in popularity in foreign fields is noted in a report by the Rubber Division of the Department of Commerce. American imports into Persia were exceeded only by French, and by a margin of less than $2,000. American imports exceeded those of Britain by a margin of $10,000.

TIRPLANE AUTO RACES

A combination of automobile, motorcycle and airplane races is planned for the Atlantic City Motor Speedway on Decoration Day. On the program will be contests between stock cars and special automobiles, parachute jumping and airplane stunting.

A NEW DETROIT BOAST

The most unusual chorus on the stage is Detroit's latest claim for added fame. A secret ballot among members of the Chrysler Vanities chorus revealed that of 32 girls, 29 did not smoke, 22 refused to countenance any necking and 30 were aghast at the mere mention of participating in liquid entertainment. Frank A. Morrison, secretary of the Chrysler Corporation and author and manager of the play, claims this is a world record.

CONSHOHOCKEN RENOWNED

"We have been asked so often," says E. N. Niedringhaus of the Campbell-Niedringhaus Tire Service Company, distributors of Lee of Conshohocken tires, "where and what is Conshohocken and why does Lee use it in all their advertising."

Conshohocken is an old, revolutionary times town, now a suburb of Philadelphia. It has received the jolt of its life by being dragged into the limelight through the publicity it is receiving as the home of Lee tires.

While the Lee Company does not claim to have ever had any of the old revolutionary patriots on its payroll, it has had members of three generations of the same family working as tire craftsmen in its 45 years of rubber manufacturing experience. It has at the present time some of the descendants of the men who wintered with George Washington at Valley Forge, which is only a few miles away.

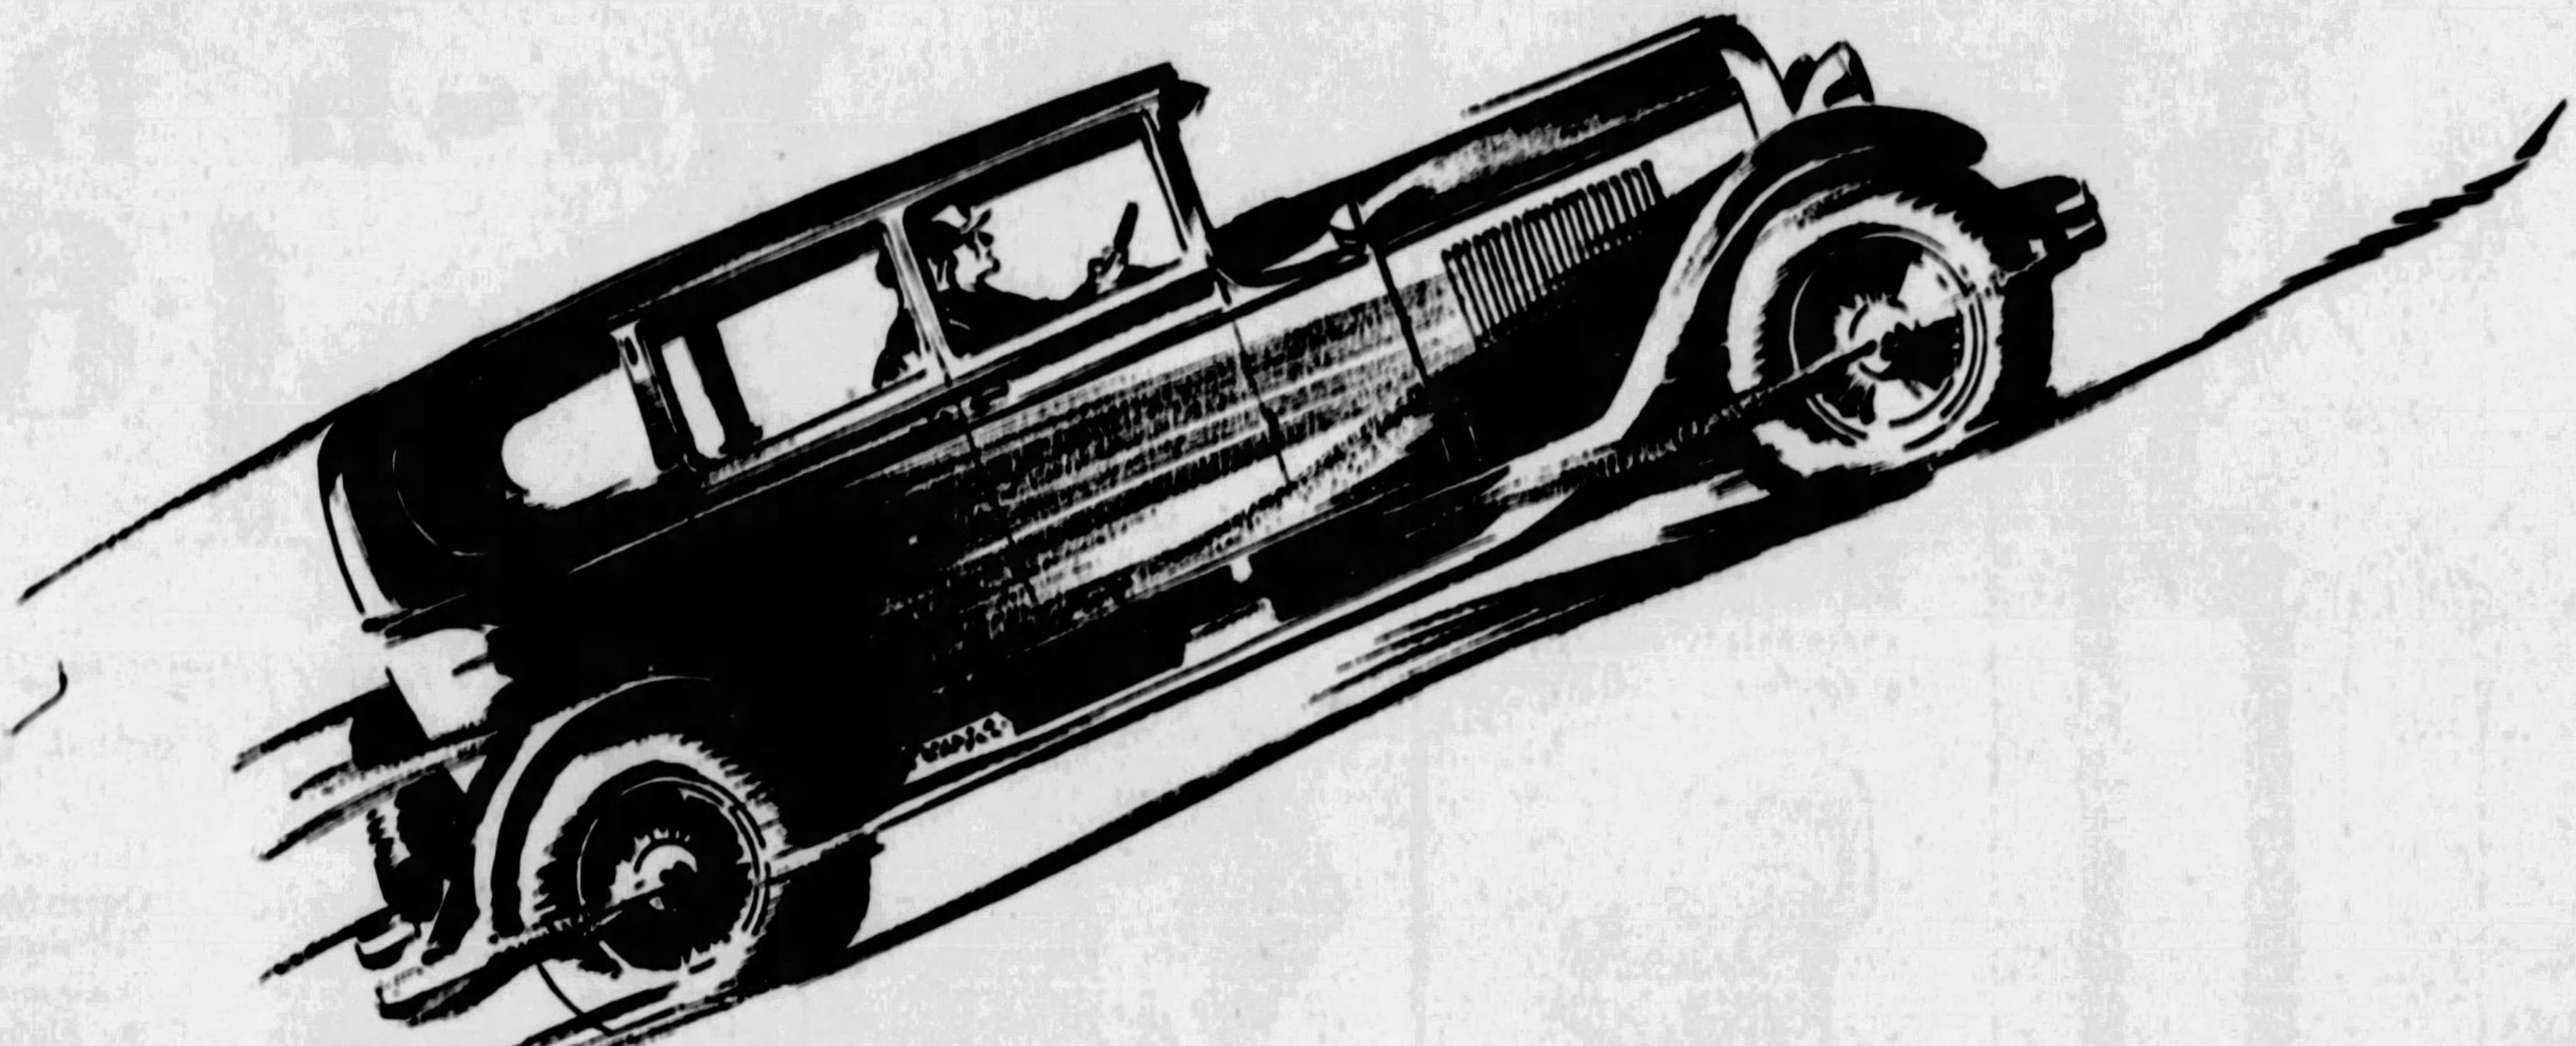
WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT . . . BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

STILL LOOKING FOR A MOUNTAIN SHE CAN CALL A HILL



REO FLYING CLOUD, fresh from her new won laurels at Uniontown, flattens out Pittsburgh's highest "Mountains"

Pittsburgh, in automobile circles, has a reputation for being "hilly."

In fact, certain "hills" in Pittsburgh were popularly supposed to be as unconquerable (in high gear, of course) as the law against "perpetual motion."

And so the 1929 Flying Cloud, in her quest "for a mountain she could call a hill," set sail for Pittsburgh.

On the way down she stopped off at Uniontown just long enough to skip blithely over the top with three adult passengers at 51 miles an hour—thereby amazing the entire city and throwing consternation into competitive circles.

But that was just a stop-off. Pittsburgh was the main objective.

The next day Pittsburgh's much-vaunted "heights" were flattened out in most convincing fashion.

First there was the Negley Avenue "hill."

This hill, rising 16½ feet in every 100, need not be described to the residents of the Steel City in the heart of the Alleghenies. They know it all too well as the "hill that can't be climbed in high."

Now the hills that "can't be climbed in high" are precisely the hills that the Flying Cloud is looking for.

So she took one look, dropped back a scant 100 yards (the street-car track crossing the base of the hill at right angles, together with the congested traffic condition, made a starting speed of more than 30 miles an hour impossible) and went over the top at 20 miles an hour, carrying the driver and one other adult!

Then someone suggested the "Tokio Street hill."

And there—until Friday, April 6—was a hill.

It's a quarter of a mile long, and its grade is 19¼%. One look and it seemed as though the Flying Cloud at last had met her master. Even the most enthusiastic of the Flying Cloud boosters shook their heads and said, "It can't be done; there isn't an automobile built that can carry two people over the crest of that 'mountain' in high gear."

The Flying Cloud went over, time after time, at 16 to 18 miles an hour!

Then spoke Harold Blanchard, Technical Editor of Motor, who was an interested witness: "I never expected to see the day when I should watch an automobile climb a 19% grade in high gear!"

Like Alexander of old, the Flying Cloud was seeking new worlds to conquer.

The quest for a "mountain she could call a hill" was rapidly becoming futile.

But there remained Heberton Hill.

Last year's Flying Cloud, outdistancing most if not all of her competitors, had been in the habit of going over the top with five passengers at between 25 and 30 miles an hour. It would be interesting to see how much, if any, faster the 1929 model would negotiate the 14% grade.

With two passengers she glided over the top at 47 miles an hour; and with six full-grown men a speed of 42 miles an hour was maintained.

The famous Tokio Street Hill—19¼ per cent grade, and a quarter of a mile long. Yet the Flying Cloud zoomed up it in high, time after time.

The quest of "a mountain that she can call a hill" continues. And in her trail she is leaving marks that will give her 1929 competitors an ample target for the best engineering skill of their designers.

She is giving her new owners—and is ready to give YOU—1929 performance in the middle of the 1928 season!

We almost forgot to add one of the most significant feats of this remarkable Flying Cloud.

In Pittsburgh, after abandoning temporarily her search for a hill, she went out and with the same gear-ratio used in the hill-climbing tests did 70 miles an hour on a straightaway. Here is one instance where speed-on-the-level has not been sacrificed to get hill-climbing power.

REO MOTOR CAR COMPANY, Lansing, Mich.

Have you ever stopped to figure just how steep a 19 per cent grade is? Railroads rarely lay out grades steeper than 2 per cent—a grade indicated by the bottom line in this diagram. One of the steepest railroad grades in all the world is the Moffat Tunnel where it crosses Soldier's Summit. This is a 4 per cent grade. It takes five giant locomotives to push a nine-car train up this grade. Yet a Flying Cloud with two passengers climbed a 19 per cent grade in high, and went over the top repeatedly at speeds of 16 to 18 miles an hour.

Reo Wolverines, $1195 and $1295; Reo Flying Clouds from $1625 to $1995, at Lansing, plus tax

OLYMPIC STEPPERS

Sisterhood of B'Nai Israel, North Negley avenue, last night held a kirmess of its childrens' dancing classes in Peabody High school auditorium. Here are the Olympic steppers: Helen Miller, Rose Gallow, Toots Krimsky, Rose Shulman, Annabelle Rosenberg, Tillie Mallinger, and Minerva Mallinger.

MISS COQUETTE

This little lady is known as Little Miss Coquette, perhaps because she looks coquettish. She's really and truly Elaine Blanche Fierman.

DUTCH DANCE

The program, of course, had a Dutch dance. What would a dance program be without one? The little girls above, all Dutch, are Pauline Sharsky, Phyllis Levine, Janet Amdursky, Sara Heller, Sylvia Shapiro, and Harriett Arons. The kirmess last night attracted a large number of members of the congregation.

SNOWBALLS

Here we have six little snowballs and the six little snowballs do an appropriate snowball dance. They're consistent. They are Jeanne Lubin, Rita Letwin, Ethel Lubin, Bobby Fey Franklin, Florence Shanchuk, and Eleanor Esther Holtzman. Those in charge of the kirmess and its production included Mrs. Samuel Cohen and Mrs. David Busis.

Daddy of All Gorillas and a Rascal Elephant

Horn Brings Down One After It Had Laid Out Four Native Hunters

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

In his reminiscences of 50 years ago in Darkest Africa, Trader Horn, writing at 73, tells of his experiences in trading, hunting and studying the native tribes and animals. He has become a blood brother of the Fans, a member of a cannibal secret society and has determined to rescue Nina, the white goddess of the Isogas. A strange story he tells of the music and morals of the tribes.

Hornets Stop an Elephant Hunt

By ALFRED ALOYSIUS HORN

Edited by ETHELREDA LEWIS.

CHAPTER XXV.

ON ARRIVING at the Mpondis of the Okelleys I could soon see that great havoc had occurred on account of marauding elephants and gorillas besides other animals. One rascal paid them nocturnal visits and was supposed to be the most dangerous of all the animal visitors. The native hunters then told me that the next unwelcome customer was a large old gorilla who was likewise greatly to be feared, as he had already charged a party of men who had followed him to his home about two hours distant and had been heard giving voice and drumming at dawn. They thought there would be a good chance of getting him that morning and we wound our way along the creek to the place mentioned.

ALFRED A. HORN

I was told to take a stand beside an old fallen tree, as he generally passed that spot if disturbed. If he came their way they would surely have him for the damage he had done to their plantations. I took the stand with my faithful head boy and from where we could see the Okelly four in number lying prone in the brush at the edge of the clearing. We waited for some time, but could see or hear no sound indicating his whereabouts. I was just about to give up the gorilla chase and try my luck at spooring the rascal elephant when there was a sound of a rolling stone reached us from over the creek and once in a while we could get a glimpse of his head and shoulders as he showed up above the round large boulders.

Presently he rolled over one of these large stones and he was busily engaged breakfasting on the large insects which were under the rocks. Having satisfied himself with this kind of tidbit he peered around and, thinking the coast was clear, he walked cautiously towards an old peanut clearing and as he came up within about 20 yards of where the native hunters were concealed he seemed to suddenly hear something out of the way.

SECOND NEWS SECTION THE SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS FEATURES
WEDNESDAY, MAY 9, 1928

The Okellies now fired on him, but instead of scampering away, as he was only slightly wounded, he made a bound on them, using his arms. One man and gun he sent fully 10 feet high in the air and played havoc with the others, scattering them with a snap of his arms, while one of them, gaining his feet, was knocked sideways again.

He used his knuckles and long arms (I never saw him bite) so quickly that one could scarcely see which was gorilla and which was man in the mix up as he played skittles with them—he seemed to knock them before him.

Contrary to what I had expected he never used his teeth, although their bite is terrible and said by the natives also to be poisonous, and I never have seen a man brave enough to stand and let him seize a gun before firing, as I heard the hunters saw was done by the Evilis of Anguni.

He then came bounding towards us and seemed to have sighted us. I fired low under the chin and Renchoro followed suit. He rolled over and over stretching and lay dead at the other side of the old fallen tree. He was very large and although I have hunted them for years he was by far the biggest I ever saw alive.

I now hastened to where the hunters lay stretched out. The first fellow we met was laid 20 yards from the others and as we tried to give him a brandy from my hunting flask he came to, but must have been dazed, as he broke away and began to run on all fours in fright; we shouted to him to stop and he took his tot like a good man and when he had completely recovered from his shock his memory returned.

We examined him but only discovered a bruise on his right thigh and he also had a few corners knocked off him which must have been done when he was knocked amongst the small bushes.

I commenced to pour brandy on these wounds, but he resented this waste and laughingly said it would do him more good to drink it, as it was fine medicine, so I gave him another wet. The next man was badly wounded by a hit upwards along the ribs and had also a long wound from above his kneecap, and he was bleeding profusely and was unconscious.

We now looked at the dead gorilla, who the big chief said had grown so big and wide on the food he stole from his plantations that he was the largest he had ever seen.

I returned to the village with the chief, who promised to have the animal brought in at once and buried over a large ant-heap so that I could call for his remains on my return from the upriver country. At the village I enjoyed a hearty meal and sat and talked away the time with the old Ogo (native for chief).

The gorilla arrived, but unfortunately was disemboweled and cut in two halves, but as this was done it was useless to say anything. They had done this, as he was too heavy to carry otherwise. He was duly buried and was a grand specimen and fetched a good price in England in spite of the fact that his spine had been badly hacked by an axe and several bones broken.

Hunting Rascal Tusker

Late in the afternoon we received news of the rogue elephant who was heading towards us, as he had been frightened by a band of Osheba hunters who had crossed over from the north bank of the Ogowe at a point about 12 miles north.

The evening was spent in spinning yarns about the Oshebas.

I was awakened before daylight and had trackers following the rascal elephant, which we found in the edge of a grove of Illundas (tree bearing nuts). As still hunting is the only method of hunting elephants attended by much success, we separated into three parties and advanced cautiously in file following in the wake of the trackers.

We followed him, although we had great difficulty in seeing him, as we still kept file for speed's sake. Presently he circled, having sighted a crowd of men and women who were following us with their baskets ready for elephant meat, as he was considered a sure capture.

On his return he rattled through the bush to the right of us still going strong, but we had lost the tracker, who eventually appeared, telling us that the elephant was badly wounded, as his strides were shortening and he would no doubt make for the river crossing.

As the underbrush became more open we could travel faster, but my luck was out, as I knocked down a small wood-hornets' nest which was hanging from the branch of a tree. I was knocked clean out of the hunt, as I was badly stung over the face and neck and back and was forced to fight a battle royal with my hat.

(At this point Trader Horn pauses to make a few remarks on certain resemblances between cannibal tribes and civilized people.)

Lore of the Tribes

"I've remembered the name of the feller that had the tobacco plant growing out of his forehead. Better than the Turkish plant, this tobacco. It was Talaqui. Came to me when I was waking up on Thursday morning. If only we could learn to make regular use of the powers of the memory when asleep, history wouldn't have so much nonsense about it.

"Talk of history, those cannibal tribes were just as particular as we are. Oshebas, Fans and all the rest of it, their genealogies are as honorably cared for as a duke's. Aye, and there'll be less blots on the scutcheon. Not so much of these Stuarts and Charles the Seconds.

"Come to that the Georges were not so different, only a bit quieter. . . . Always the strictest rules against immorality with other tribes. Oganga—That was the feller's name! He was a troubadour to the Mpangues. There was a place where the stories were told and the children taken regularly to hear him sing the great doings of the tribe. Sing 'em to the harp. The Palace of Hist it was called—N'koko Incoge.

"Aye, a man that knows his family record'll always get on better with savages than he does with the sort of riff-raff you knock up with here in the Golden City (Johannesburg) Homo stultus in big houses or the same make of man getting drunk in the—saloon. . . . Fellers like George T——— and Carlisle. They see a certain look in a man's eye that tells them, here is my brother, black though he may be.

"How d'you like my bits about gorillas? The Americans'll fancy that for the children. If you can write a book that knocks young and old, gives 'em a good laff and no harm to the susceptibilities—that's what goes in America. A moral people except when it comes to murder and so on. They kill very easy in some o' those places I've been.

When I was in the Diamond Detective Agency I was looking for a feller amongst the moonshiners along the Blaau (?) River. The families take it in turn there to shoot. God's Acre was full of 'em. Rival families had to lie divided by the path. 'Twas like the Mpangues and Oshebas over again. Human nature's hard to kill wherever you find it.

"Aye. A gorilla's what a lad'll never stop watching. They say on the Ivory Coast that there's three things never stop growing. A croc, a gorilla and an elephant. Add to that the fact that the gorilla isn't normal in the head. His brain is different from the brain of a man—and I've seen a few. I sent the biggest gorilla head in the world to Gerrard, Camden Town. The natives used to set store by gorilla brains for muti. No doubt they've destroyed many a valuable skeleton for that. Same power as human's it has.

"I could do very nicely with butterflies, too. Sent 'em over for quite a long time to Horniman. One of the tea nabobs. He was like a boy with the butterflies, in spite of the business. He gave me £12 for every one I caught of a certain species. And once I got £14 for a very big one. He lived at Dulwich when I knew him. Quaker family, I believe.

"The Quakers, Ma'am, I've always held to be above par, whether in trade or in religion or in ordinary life. Young feller I knew in Madagascar was a Quaker, from Philadelphia. One of their ministers—if so he may be called that has a silent religion.

"Nice feller that, with goodness writ in capitals all over his face. 'Tis a look one doesn't forget, in the ultimate end, whether on a Quaker gentleman or on that poor lady I took down the river for safe burial. 'Isn't God here?' she says, 'just the same as in America?' Looking at her face you couldn't deny it. Giving the children sweets, when we walked through the village. Why, what's the matter, Mr. Horn?' That woman, Ma'am, almost made me believe we'd reached this so-called millennium. Those great idols she kept stopping to stare at—as if they were in a museum. Her courage was bigger than Stanley's. And she died without a boastful word."

SECOND KNAPP TRIAL SET FOR MAY 21

International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 9.—Faced with a second trial on May 21 on the charge that she had stolen census money, former Secretary of State Florence E. S. Knapp, New York's first woman official, today was reported in a state bordering on collapse.

After deliberating eight hours, the Supreme Court jury before whom Mrs. Knapp had been on trial for a solid week, filed into the jury box just a few minutes past midnight last night and reported a disagreement.

Although she had hoped for an acquittal, Mrs. Knapp smiled. Then came the shock which swept away the iron nerve that had carried her so successfully through seven days of gruelling trial. Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan set the second trial for May 21.

The woman, who at the height of her political power a few years ago had sought the Republican gubernatorial nomination, was crushed.

She sank back into the chair, and for a moment it appeared she might faint. Her face turned ashen.

Her only comment was:

"I have nothing to say."

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

By HAVEY J. BOYLE

JOHN HARRIS introduced this column to the Variety club, an organization which, as far as we can find out, is dedicated to the proposition of listening to Ukulele Pat Healey play, as you may have suspected ere this, the ukulele.

PAT used to take to the air often, strumming his instrument, and singing sentimental songs. If you are a radio fan you likely know Ukulele Healey. He played a few numbers the other night at the Variety club, whose clubhouse, by the way, is in the William Penn Hotel, but we were so constantly interrupted in our listening by Chick Fraser, of the Pirates, that we didn't get enough of Pat's gems. Other interested listeners—to Pat—were Pie Traynor and Donie Bush, also of the Pirates.

THERE was something quite romantic about the setting, as the lights were low, and Mr. Fraser, in soft tones, told us how he set Jewell Ens 500 recently in a bridge game. You can't appreciate what that means unless you have seen Jewell Ens in the act of being set two or three or five hundred. He runs his hands through his hair, crosses his legs, recrosses them, slumps in his chair, moves upright and winds up with a few well-directed expletives.

• • •

MR. FRASER reports he soon will leave the sidewalks of our village to start his annual trek into the wilds of the low country stalking the wary baseball ivory on the hoof.

BOB LORD sends us a copy of the biography of Dan Patch, who was to harness racing what Man O' War was to the running races. Dan Patch hauled his driver in a sulky while Man O' War carried his jockey on his back.

WHILE Mr. Lord is not particularly a horse fancier, he was so struck with the story of Dan Patch he sent it along. Patch was in that select circle of horses that made the mile in less than two minutes. Only eight have entered that circle.

It is a book that will interest boys and girls, men and women. Horses and dogs rate high in the esteem of the human. A thoroughbred horse is considered by horsemen as sensitive as a human. How Dan Patch showed concern and remorse after he had nearly run down the small daughter of his owner is an example of the horse's intelligence.

THOSE gentlemen who stage the matinee races Wednesday afternoons at the Schenley Oval during the summer time know all about Dan Patch's records, but they likely will get a kick out of reading of his early training, his rise and inevitable decline.

PITTSBURGH is not to have immediately, at least, the pleasure of entertaining the German and Irish crew of the trans-Atlantic Bremen. More's the pity. We had a nice page line ready to submit to the news editor on the day the aviators came: "Welcome, Volunteer Flier-Men."

SPEAKING of horses, which we were a few sentences ago, Burleigh Grimes, of the Pirates, owns 16 nags which he keeps on his farm in Minerva, O. Possibly, he seeks to supply the demand when a fan yells at an umpire: "Why don't you get a horse?"

Saxon Demands the Return Of the Plans and Mary Laughs at Him

HE thought of the plans, secreted somewhere in these apartments, and with tremendous effort controlled himself.

"Why do you say it was money I might never repay, since I was to build the Manor house?"

Her lips curved in a movement of patronage. "A house that might never be built! We may also consider an estate on the Rhine. Shall I advance the fee for that?"

"Mary, are you holding the plans as security for the $4,000?"

"I'm holding them! For reasons best known to myself."

"To punish me because I didn't feel in a tender mood last evening? Isn't this a little ruthless? You know I've only a day or two to get all my blueprints finished. After all, you're interested in this project. You don't want to destroy the work of eight or nine months for a passing vengeance, do you?"

She was listening intently, her eyes lowered and the color creeping higher in her cheeks.

"What will you gain by ruining me? I have hopes for those plans. They're good. You made it possible for me to go in on this, and you don't want us to lose now. You want me to win that prize."

"Why should I want that? Want someone to make a fool of me! Boost you up for someone else—for that girl I saw in your office Saturday."

"You didn't see any girl in my office. I've not made a fool of you, nor wished to."

"No—you only played me along for eight months. You only took all you could get and then come out flat-footed and say you never intended to marry me! I love that. I just feast on that!

"But you've ditched the wrong girl this time, old dear! You've ditched just one too many when you ditched me!"

CHAPTER LXXIV.

"OH, forget it, Mary! I've not ditched you or played you along, and you know it. We were the best of friends when we started out last night. And when we came back here you seemed in a most enchanting mood."

Mary Eunice glanced at him across a burning silence. He went on coolly: "Why did you all at once blow up? Things I said weren't new. A hundred times you've laughed them off with a tolerant shrug."

"And did you expect me to laugh them off last night? Did you expect me to go on discounting your words and believing your deeds?"

She tapped the ashes carefully from her cigaret and with an arrogant slowness lifted her glance to his.

He bridled at the insolent challenge. She actually expected him to admit he had engaged himself. And she was so entrenched in her conceit that she would believe him were he now to say: "Of course, that's what I expected! Why get excited because I rail against marriage? You have me in the hollow of your hand. We both know it."

She was expecting him to say this! He took a half menacing step.

"What did my deeds give you cause to believe, Mary?"

"That you loved me. That I was one woman in the world with whom marriage would be tolerable. Naturally I've ignored smart things you've said because I had your acts as evidence that you were only talking for talk's sake. A man doesn't play girls in my position! He doesn't pay them ardent attention before the whole world unless he has honorable intentions."

He grew appalled at her tenacity. She had this one point, and she would stick to it and come back to it, and there was no opening her mind to any other argument. No mollifying her.

He must agree! He must admit that he had bound himself. He must now assure her that in spite of all his words he did in truth love her. He wished to marry her. He must say this or she would not be budged.

And saying it would not be enough. He must go out forthwith and marry her.

The knowledge that she was waiting for this; that this only would appease her, aroused him to growing, insensate fury.

She sat there so monumentally insolent, puffing her cigaret, removing it with leisurely disdain.

The violet negligee had scarfs of chiffon fastened to her wrists. These fluttered with an indolent grace as she now moved her hands.

The sight of her in this attitude of conscious power filled him with monstrous repulsion. Sitting there smiling and waiting for him to cringe.

"In any event," said he, walking up to the coffee table, and with superhuman effort, covering his furious antagonism, "how do you simplify matters by stealing my plans? If I haven't intended to marry you, do you think this move of yours will force me into it?

"Hadn't you better return the plans and let the case between us be decided on its merits? If I were mad for you, could you force me into a declaration by a spoiled kid trick like this?"

She flung her head back with a jerking suddenness. Two blazing green eyes met his—narrowed dangerously.

"Ah—you want the plans first—MY plans?"

"Good God!" said he, the blood flaming into his mind. "Did you think you could club me into marrying YOU by holding out on them?"

Her eyes became slits—lighted green slits. And they now slanted with Oriental subtlety. "You are mad for me! But you want the plans returned before you will say it!"

She drew herself from the couch and came close to him—so close he felt her breath—felt its warmth. She said with low, insulting command: "The interview is ended. I'm having guests for luncheon and shall now dress. You may leave!"

He caught her wrists, backed her to the wall. He leaned down and whispered hoarsely: "Give me the plans. I'll murder you!"

She tossed her head back with a laugh: "I've only to scream and you'll be kicked out like a dog!"

"You won't scream! I warn you. But you go now and get my plans."

"Oh, you want your plans, do you? You don't think it's fair to be robbed after pouring eight months of love into a thing. One is enough to get a deal like that? And the one shall be me? But I think it's so nice and chummy to have two made monkeys. The laugh's on you, big boy!"

She stood defying him—lips curving with contempt. It suddenly occurred to him that she could defy him. She had him in her power. She had his work, his life of the past eight months, his inspired and beautiful dream in her possession. She could destroy it. She would destroy it!

He shook her so that her head knocked against the wall. But he was not aware he was doing this. He was saying with a hoarse low sob, "Get them! You'll get them! Oh, my God, did you think I would marry you! Did you think you could threaten me into that? I seduced you! Good Lord! Do you think your filthy money has any claim on me? And you'd beat me into it one way or another. Now you get the plans. You'll get them!" . . . His hands rose from her shoulders to her throat.

"At the sight of his bared teeth, she suddenly flung with all her strength against him . . . she suddenly screamed out at the top of her voice. But he seized her hands and dragged her to the door. He locked it—locked the door to the hall.

"Now scream . . . !"

"You leave! You get out of here! I'll have the doors smashed down!"

He laughed at her. He went to the closet and pulled open a chest—he pulled out the drawers of the bureau, emptied the contents on the floor. He tore into her dressing room and in a maniac rage went through the clothes.

"And when you get through with that," said she, regaining control, "there are 19 more rooms for you to rifle. There are two basements in this house and an attic."

She ran to the door in answer to repeated knocking. She said in a measured, exasperated tone: "Well, well—what do you want?"

The colored butler gave some muttered response.

"You thought I screamed? Don't be an idiot, Bill! I laughed. Mind your own business."

"But the guests are here, Miss Pennings. The luncheon is served."

"Well, hold it a moment. I'm delayed. Apologize for me. Then send Thelma up and tell her to wait outside the door till I ring."

She turned back and with hot eyes regarded the havoc he was making.

"When you get through wrecking this house, I'll advise you to drag the bay. You'll have more success."

He came up to her: "You've not destroyed them. DON'T!"

She backed from him. She said, frightened but in a soft swift tone' "There are seven mutual friends of ours downstairs. Hadn't you better smooth yourself down and get out of here? My maid is standing at the door now and listening. If you don't leave, I'm going to tell her to bring Bill up here—I'll have the door smashed down."

"You'll have one dead butler on your hands!"

"That won't give you back your plans!"

She put her lips to the keyhole: "Thelma, I've locked myself in. Go into mother's room and open that pass door with her key—"

"You have not destroyed those plans," he repeated, turning on her a livid and terrible glance. "Don't!"

CHAPTER LXXV.

AT 2 o'clock Saxon walked into his office. He went blindly past a visitor sitting on a bench. He reached the draughting board, pulled open the deep drawer that was now empty, stood before it muttering. He was blanched and desperate.

Jerry, whom he had not even seen, and who was waiting for him, watched in blank astonishment.

"What's the matter?" she inquired, touching his arm.

"She stole my plans!"

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Society, Afflicted With Spring Fever, Confines Most of Its Activities to Informal Affairs

SOCIETY folks are succumbing to spring fever—even those who spent the greater part of the winter in the South. For it is not only the relief from cold weather we feel in the spring, don't you think, but the delicate beauty of the landscape?

We usually associate languor with spring fever; yet many society folks are playing hard at golf. More of them, though, I believe, are attracted by the delight of being out of doors than by the science of the game. And more society people are motoring out in the green gold country than are playing golf.

Down in Sewickley society folks are doing quite a little spring entertaining, but they are subject to the spell of spring, too, for all the events are informal.

Mrs. Franklin T. Nevin, of Hopkins street, Sewickley, is one of the spring hostesses in the Valley. This afternoon and again tomorrow afternoon she will entertain in her home with informal teas in honor of Miss Ellen Scrase, of London, England. Miss Scrase is Mrs. Nevin's house guest. She is planning to spend about a fortnight in Sewickley. Mrs. Nevin will ask about 12 friends on each afternoon to meet Miss Scrase, I understand.

Informal teas are certainly popular this spring. Haven't you ever noticed that formal teas are always given in the late fall or winter?

Mrs. James Madison Stoner, of Edgeworth, will entertain, I hear, with an informal tea at her home on Friday afternoon.

Pinehurst attracts the members of the Pittsburgh and Sewickley "400" all the year round it seems. Eleanor Gilchrist left the end of the week for that popular resort. There she will be the guest of Louis Way, daughter of Judge and Mrs. William Way. Of course you all know the Ways, who used to live in Sewickley. Eleanor will be gone about 10 days, I have been told.

Eleanor and her sister, Caroline, are surely active members of the younger set. They are always going or coming back from some delightful trip, or they are taking part in some benefit, or attending some social event.

Caroline has just returned from Baltimore, where she spent a week with friends.

Now that the elements are in a pleasanter mood, many folks will start out on motor trips. Mrs. James Barlow Cullum, Jr., of Sewickley, left Saturday morning by motor for the East. She will spend about a week in Philadelphia and Atlantic City, I understand.

This is a season of the year when relatives begin to visit each other. Mrs. Harry Good and her young daughter, Sarah Jane, of Latrobe, are spending a fortnight with Mrs. Good's parents, the John E. Porters, of Sewickley.

You will be interested, I know, in hearing that Margaret Perkins has chosen her wedding date. Margaret, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Curtis Perkins, of the Plaza, New York and Southampton, will marry John Speer Laughlin, son of the junior George M. Laughlins, of Woodland road, on Friday, June 22, in the Church of St. Andrew-on-the-Dunes, Southampton. The time is 4 o'clock and the ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Percy G. Kammerer, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church. Mrs. Perkins is in mourning, so there will be no reception, of course.

Margaret will have her cousin, Martha Chalfant, for her maid of honor, and another Pittsburgh girl, Clodagh McCune, will be a bridesmaid. The other bridesmaids, I understand, are to be Retta Johnston, of Lexington, Ky., also one of Margaret's cousins; Beatrice Patterson, of Philadelphia and Southampton, and Phyllis B. Thompson, of New York.

The young Laughlins are planning a trip abroad and when they come back they will live here.

You probably remember that Margaret made her debut here about three years ago. Mr. Laughlin is now taking a post-graduate course at the Yale law school.

The F. W. Edmondsons, of South Negley avenue, have been in New York, always an attraction to Pittsburghers. Over the week-end their attractive sub-deb daughter, Martha, joined them. Martha, you know, is a student at Miss Spence's School.

The James B. Laughlins, of Devonshire drive, also have been attracted to the East. They have been in New York. While there they stopped at the Barclay.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Flaccus, of "Red Gables Farm," Kittanning road, and their daughter, Jane, who are traveling in Europe, you know, are now in Paris, and will go over to London the latter part of the month, I hear.

They expect to return home early in June. Their son, Charles L. Flaccus, Jr., will come on from Harvard next week to ride his father's horses in the Cleveland horse show. His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Bliss, of Shady avenue, are planning to go to Cleveland for the show, too.

Miss Nell Smith, daughter of Mrs. A. H. Smith, of Cincinnati, has chosen June 6 as the date for her marriage to O. E. Lysle, of this city. The wedding will take place in Cincinnati.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McAdams, of Ridge avenue, Coraopolis, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Virginia Elizabeth McAdams, to Robert J. Walsh, son of Mrs. Mary C. Walsh, of Crafton. A June wedding is planned.

Miss Elizabeth Hazlewood Kuhns, daughter of Mrs. A. J. Kuhns, of Wilkinsburg, has named June 9 as the date for her marriage to Charles Lawrence Bane, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bane, of Waynesburg, Pa.

The National Park Seminary Alumnae will hold a luncheon Friday in the home of Mrs. William Duff, in Ben Avon. The hostesses will be Mrs. Duff and Mrs. Theodore Tafel.

The Pittsburgh Lyceum will hold its annual Maytime dance tonight in the Lyceum in Washington place. Young women from the Epiphany Church parish are assisting the Lyceum members.

A dinner and dance will be given Friday night in the William Penn Hotel by the Presbyterian Hospital Nurses' Alumnae Association in honor of the graduating class.

MRS. J. EDWARD LEWIS

MUSICAL CLUB HONORS ASSISTANT SECRETARY

Mrs. George H. Wilson, for 20 years assistant secretary of the Tuesday Musical Club, was made an honorary member at the annual meeting in the Hotel Schenley yesterday. In response to a most gracious tribute paid her by Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh, the first president in whose regime she had served, Mrs. Wilson commented on the changes which had come to the Tuesday Musical, contrasting the day (only 13 years ago) when the president herself had paid the season's deficit with the present time when the club is contemplating its half-million dollar memorial building. Mrs. Wilson was presented with a handsome leather hand bag by the presidents through whose administrations she had carried her duties.

The luncheon, which was an elaborately appointed affair with exceptionally attractive decorations, followed the business meeting. At the latter, reports, all showing strides forward, were heard and the annual election was held. The result: First vice president, Mrs. Sydney A. Chalfant; second vice president, Mrs. David A. Pitcairn; recording secretary, Mrs. A. M. Dudley; federation secretary, Mrs. Charles H. Aufhammer; treasurer, Mrs. Thomas K. Cree; choral chairman, Mrs. F. D. Newbury; altruistic chairman, Mrs. Elmer W. Flaccus; ensemble chairman, Miss Helen Roessing; extension chairman, Mrs. Edward B. Lee; manuscript chairman, Miss Gertrude E. Goeddel; directors, Mrs. F. W. Edmondson, Mrs. Charles H. Henninger, Mrs. William W. Renshaw, Mrs. H. Harper Smith.

Mrs. Will Earhart, who is concluding the first half of her two-year term as president, presided. Viola Karlson Byrgerson's contralto solos with fine accompaniments by Marion Clark Bollinger, were the musical feature of the program and needless to say they were beautifully done. There was assembly singing also, led by Mrs. Arthur B. Siviter, with Mrs. Gertrude Martin Rohrere, composer of some of the songs, at the piano. Mrs. T. C. Donovan gave a few reactions to the memorial plan, these coming from well known persons, and Frank C. Harper, Pittsburgh columnist, spoke on "The Tuesday Musical Club and the Community."

A guest day and tea will be held by the Wilkinsburg Civic Club tomorrow afternoon in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. Mrs. Bertha Gross King will have charge of a musical program and health talks will be given by Dr. R. R. Bayen and Dr. J. K. Wampler.

Under auspices of the Lee Community Club and the Beechwood Board of Trade and as a benefit for the Lee School picnic fund, the South Hills Repertoire Company will present two plays tomorrow and Friday nights in the school auditorium. The two programs will also include dancing, music, readings and other features. Next Monday evening the program committee of the Community Club will give a butterfly party.

At next week's meeting of the Wednesday Afternoon Club of Carnegie Institute of Technology, Miss Frances H. King will tell of the trip which she made to Spain last summer. The hostesses are Mrs. William R. Work, at whose home in Beacon street the meeting will be held, Mrs. C. H. Prine, Mrs. James Aston, Mrs. E. B. Nettleton.

Miss Priscilla Dean, screen and stage star, who is making personal appearances at a local theater this week, will be the guest of the Business and Professional Women's Club tomorrow at luncheon in the Downtown Y. M. C. A. Reservations are being made with Miss Margaret Louise Kirschner, at the "Y."

James McClain, violin, and Mrs. Paul McCandless, contralto, will give the program of entertainment before the Grove City College Club at its meeting Saturday in the Congress of Clubs. The hostesses, of whom Mrs. Lambert Turner is chairman, have arranged for bridge to follow luncheon. The club has elected the following new officers: President, Miss Daisy Ray; vice presidents, Mrs. Vergil Thomas and Mrs. Howard Kiebler; corresponding secretary, Miss Laura Pond; recording secretary, Miss Minnie Robins; treasurer, Miss Blanche Holman.

Mrs. William Miller will assist Mrs. Howard Miller, of Elmhurst road, Greentree, when the latter entertains the Crafton Heights Woman's Club tomorrow afternoon. The club choral will sing, Mrs. C. R. Crow will discuss "The Relation of Diet to Health" and Mrs. C. E. Ruth will tell of "The Symphony in Our City."

* * *

The Prytaneum Study Club will have a change of meeting place for its closing session on May 22, Mrs. Charles Stone, of Homestead, being the hostess. Mrs. Frank Bolton entertained yesterday's meeting at her home in Homestead Park. The principal paper, which was by Mrs. James Campbell, was on "Our Heritage." Mrs. Stone was leader and read selections from Van Loon's "Tolerance." Mrs. W. F. Stevens spoke on "Racial Intolerance" and Mrs. Frank Toy discussed whether citizens should know what was being taught in the public schools.

NO DANDRUFF NOW

This matter of keeping hair free from dandruff is neither the complicated nor expensive one that most women consider it. Usually the trick can be done by regular shampooing and the systematic use of Listerine, the safe antiseptic.

At the first sign of dandruff, you simply douse Listerine on the scalp full strength, and with the fingers, massage the scalp vigorously forward and backward, then up and down. In a surprisingly short time you will be delighted with results. We have hundreds of unsolicited letters testifying to the success of Listerine in checking dandruff. DIRECTORS PICK GIRL'S CHIEF ALLURE

Screen tests reveal smooth skin most important

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Dark or fair, piquant or classic, whatever her style, there is one thing every girl must possess if she hopes to become a star. This all important requisite is smooth skin. "The close-up is the final test of a screen star's popularity—and surest proof of her beauty," declares James Cruze, Pathé DeMille director. For this reason directors consider smooth skin—"studio skin"—even more necessary for success than gorgeous eyes or a fascinating mouth.

Nine out of ten movie stars in Hollywood are using Lux Toilet Soap for their priceless skin. This new soap is made by the celebrated method perfected by the French for the manufacture of their world famous toilet soaps. Jacqueline Logan, Pathé DeMille star, says: "The satin smoothness of my skin after Lux Toilet Soap is delightful."

All the big film studios have selected it as the official soap for their dressing rooms—an interesting comment on the value which they place on smooth skin. Lux Toilet Soap is manufactured by Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

MAN'S SWEET CREDULITY

ONE reason why men are happier than women is because a man is the most credulous and optimistic creature on earth when it comes to believing anything he WANTS to believe.

You may convince a man against his better judgment, his intuition, his principles and all his common sense—but you can never convince him against his will and his inclinations.

You may convnce him that you can't be kissed—but you can never convince him that you don't really WANT to be kissed.

HELEN ROWLAND

You may convince him that you know that all his lovemaking is just a good line of "apple sauce"—but never that you don't enjoy listening to it.

You may convince him that a woman't intuition is uncanny and infallible—but never that he can't succeed in fooling her.

You may convince him that your prophecies were right—but never that he was mistaken in his judgment.

You may convince him that you can't be kissed—but you can him extravagantly—but never that you just like him casually and admire him only mildly.

You may convince him that you consider petting vulgar, cheap and pernicious—but never that any woman couldn't be petter, if a man went about it scientifically.

You may convince him that he's going too fast a pace, smoking too much, drinking too much, and burning the candle at both ends—but never that it's going to land him in the hospital, the poorhouse or the divorce court.

You may convince him that you understand him—but never that you see THROUGH him or that you are ONTO him.

* * *

You may convince him that you are sweet, and sincere, and even angelic—but never that you are reasonable, and frank, and logical.

You may convince him that he isn't an Adonis or a Rudolph Valentino—but you can never convince him that there isn't SOMETHING about him devilishly taking with the women."

* * *

In short, next to trying to convince a mule, a secondhand flivver or a "fixed" jury, the hardest feat on earth is that of convincing a man when he doesn't want to be convinced!

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Thursday, May 10

A LIVELY and interesting day is forecast from the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects, especially for those in the employment of others and for those having hopes from those in places of power. It is time to approach these for favors or advancement, if qualified by diligence and perseverance. Labor should bring reward but the finances call for protection. Shun speculation, although the proclivities will be toward action. Personal affairs may assume sensational angles.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year of advancement or preferment if in the employment of others or if seeking favors or honors from those in authority. Diligence and application may expect recognition. Finances should not be jeopardized. Personal affairs may assume sensational or unconventional angles. A child born on this day should be talented, capable and diligent and should succeed well in employment or in places of trust.

A time will come when all will know just why the storms and breezes blow.—Burns.

FAY-KING

By FAY KING.

THE number of accidents these days is more than appalling.

Children are killed daily, pedestrians injured.

The drivers are at fault. Pedestrians and children are also at fault.

Why will people risk neck and limb wedging their way through the densest traffic when there is a moment's pause?

No appointment can possibly be so important for anyone to take the foolish chances so many take. It takes only a second to maim one for life, and then what good are all those so important matters?

Many persons carry accident insurance. But accident insurance companies must protect themselves, also. Many policies contain clauses which, if read, show there are certain conditions under which the accident must happen.

Those who would sue for large amounts must also remember that they are not apt to win if it is proved they were not where they should have been when the accident happened.

I have seen children who know better purposely dash in front of oncoming cars as if it were part of a game to frighten the driver.

I have cautioned older children I have observed urging younger ones to beat the cars across a street.

Parents should see that children own several balls, so that they will not risk their lives to save one. Life and limb are beyond price.

The many accidents which do happen are nothing compared to the number which just miss happening.

It is true that "a miss is as good as a mile," but one should remember it's better to be LATE—than NEVER!

Mrs. Townsend Wishes to Call and Exhibit Something Thrilling to Madge

AS KATIE at the telephone uttered the name Townsend, I rose abruptly to my feet, tingling with an excitement altogether out of proportion to the summons. But that Lillian shared my feeling I saw as she leaned forward and whispered tensely—

"The clue to this business, I'll bet a year's income."

"That's a wager I'll not take," I whispered back as I went to meet Katie, who greeted me with the wholly superfluous information that "dot Meesis Townsend" was on the telephone. My little maid's voice while she was at the telephone could easily have been heard at the Ticer farmhouse, a half mile away, I told myself petulantly.

I picked up the receiver and put it to my ear with shaking hands, for I shared Lillian's opinion that in the message or something it entailed, I should find a clue to the mystery of the occupants of The Larches. Yet I had no reason for the feeling except the remembrance of a chance remark Mrs. Townsend had made one day at The Larches when she and I met there accidentally while we were both calling upon Eleanor Lincoln. The message from her might well pertain to the local charity in which we were both interested, and which formed my only slight tie with this member of the fashionable set at Southampton. I genuinely liked what I had seen of the bustling little woman, but I promptly forgot her between our meetings, and if it had not been for the persistent memory sounding in my brain, responding to her telephone call would have held about as many thrills as one puts into an order to the butcher.

"Mrs. Graham?" Mrs. Townsend's voice, excited, almost shrill, came to my ears. "Are you going to be at home for the next hour or two?"

I assured her that I did not intend to stir from the house during the day.

"Then, do you mind if I come to see you for a few minutes? I won't detain you long, but I have something I simply must show you. I am so thrilled, and puzzled. I want your opinion. Do you remember that day at The Larches?"

"Perfectly," I told her, "and I can imagine what you wish to show me. But I think for many reasons we should not name it over the telephone."

"Oh!" she cried contritely. "You are right, and I am very thoughtless. But I am so excited. May I come down right away?"

"Of course. I shall be awaiting you with much excited curiosity."

"Thank you so much. You are such a dear," she said with the pleasant, but meaningless compliments which her sort utter with such facility, and returning her "Goodbye," I hung up the receiver and went back to Lillian.

"I think your 'hunch' is beginning to work," I told her. "Do you remember what I told you about Mrs. Townsend's call at The Larches with young Mr. Jackson when I went over to invite her to your welcoming dinner?"

She straightened from her loungeing position and looked at me with rising excitement.

"I remember nothing more vividly," she said. "But do you mean to tell me—" her voice trailed off into nothingness.

"Yes, I do," I returned. "She says she is so thrilled and has something she simply must show me. I do not imagine it is a treasurer's report of shoes distributed last month."

Brainstorms, Their Cause and Hopes of Cure

ALL the acquired mental diseases of youth are grouped under a general name. The particular condition I have in mind rarely attacks a person past 25. I refer to what the doctors call "dementia praecox."

DR. COPELAND

It is a sad thing to find a young person who has been well and strong, cheerful and normal in his mental processes, suddenly develop unusual and disturbing symptoms. The things which made him happy suddenly appear to bore and even to irritate him. A heretofore peaceful and calm individual develops "brain storms." In an attack he breaks the furniture, swears and acts like a demon.

It is bad enough for one to die after a long lifetime of usefulness, but to die in youth seems a terrible fate. Any form of hopeless disease or insanity attacking the young moves us more than a similar misfortune met by the aged.

Dementia praecox is an abnormal mental state associated with the developing period of life. It is characterized by acquired weakness of the mental processes and by many perverted ideas. In alternation with the times of overstimulation of the brain are periods of depression and sadness. There is mental alertness one day and a great confusion of mind the next.

In dementia praecox it is not unusual for the victim to recite over and over one single line of poetry. He may keep this up for hours. He performs the same act repeatedly.

A young person may be one of the most cleanly and well groomed of your acquaintances. Suddenly he becomes careless. He is negligent of his person and clothing. He is sloppy in his actions. This raises the suspicion of dementia praecox.

I have told you that this disease is acquired. The feeble-minded youth has always been weak-minded. But the victim of the trouble we are considering was formerly bright and normal. The history indicates the difference between the two disturbances.

The onset may be sudden. Shock, fright or prostration, due to bodily or mental causes, may be followed by this disability. In other cases it is gradual in its onset and the course is progressive.

The acute and sudden type is the more hopeful of cure. It may take time to accomplish it, but recovery comes. The slow type is more serious.

The outcome of the case depends on the cause. If there is some underlying and removable physical disability, the case is most favorable. Sometimes there has been long illness or overwork.

The recent advances in this field have made us more hopeful in such cases. They must be studied with particular reference to localized infection in teeth, tonsils, large intestines or other parts of the body.

Rest in bed, proper nourishment, baths, massages and change of scene are important. More important is it to find the fundamental physical trouble and to get rid of this.

Murder at the Breakfast Table

She pours the coffee—oh, if across the sunlit table from her, his face were only smiling, gay . . . Instead, a nameless tension, a stiff silence . . .

Then, suddenly, it happens: the sharp word, the quick retort, the slamming door . . . Love isn't killed at once that way, it's true. But love is murdered that way slowly, surely, day by day . . . Why?

Because the commonest physical ailment of all happens to work just that way! Because, when poisons are bottled up in the intestines—they don't stay bottled up. They go through your system, instead—sap the energy and fray the nerves.

MANY people "try everything" in the effort to correct this condition—from "health foods" that take six weeks to act, to salts that leave them limp as a rag the next day. . . .

Feen-a-mint is different!

In the first place, it is just like a bit of delicious chewing gum. You don't swallow it—you chew it.

This is important. Because you chew it, its laxative principle is released slowly, the way science meant it to be released. It actually becomes part of the digestive fluids—does not disturb digestion—works with not against the body.

The result is laxative action so gentle there's not a trace of cramping or griping—yet so wonderfully thorough that you feel like a different person!

Feen-a-mint is the result of the work of a famous European scientist and a thoughtful American physician. Already millions of people have found it preferable to all other means of combating the evils of constipation. Your first experience with Feen-a-mint will show you clearly why!

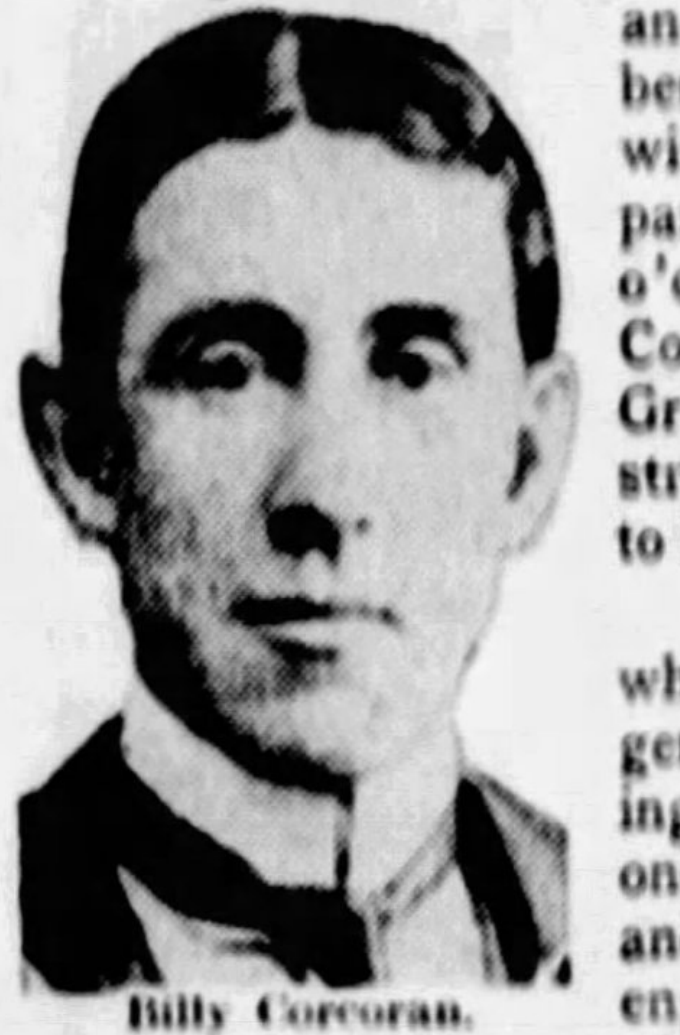
SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

One of Pittsburgh's Most Prominent Boxing Figures Passes in Death of Billy Corcoran—Kremer and Hill Able to Pitch in Giant Series After All—Six Clubs in Fight for First Place.

ONE of the pioneers who blazed the way for the prominence that Pittsburgh now holds in the boxing game, an outstanding character in sports hereabouts for almost four decades, and one of the most widely-known and best-liked characters ever connected with the Queensberry pastime in this part of the country, passed on at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when Billy Corcoran answered the summons of the Great Referee at his home, 4008 Mifflin street, after an illness of 15 weeks, due to liver trouble.



Billy Corcoran.

There are few men in the fight game who can boast a wider, longer or more general experience than Corcoran. During his long career he was boxer, second, handler, trainer, manager, referee and promoter, and though not actively engaged in the glove sport in recent years he continued to be looked upon as one of the best authorities, whose opinion was sought by many followers of the game before every important fight.

CORCORAN, who would have been 61 years old if he had lived until June 24, was born in Johnstown, but his parents removed to this city when he was a child, so that he spent practically his entire life here.

As soon as he became old enough to take an interest in athletics, Billy began to prove himself a born manager and developer, and in a short time he became one of the local leaders in the boxing game.

WHEN a very young man, Corcoran was associated with the then great Pittsburgh heavyweight, Dominick McCaffrey, who was later said to have been robbed of a victory over John L. Sullivan. He also managed the famous Pittsburgh runner and all-around athlete, Peter Priddy, who won both the five-mile and 10-mile championships at the Chicago world fair in 1892. Later he brought out, developed or managed at various times such men as Jack McClelland, who was looked upon as a real champion featherweight when he beat Abe Attell in 1901; Yock Henniger, Eddie Kennedy, Patsy Brannigan, Kid Cotton, Eddie Lenny of Philadelphia, Danny McMahon of Detroit, and Jack Blackburn of Philadelphia. He also was associated with Bob Deady of Philadelphia in the management of Al Kaufman, former white hope, handled Mike Schreck the Cincinnati heavyweight, and had helped Billy Delaney train Jack Johnson for the battle in which he beat Jim Jeffries in 1910. The last fighter he managed was Al Martin of Verona.

WHEN he became a promoter here about 30 years ago, in addition running a gymnasium in Wood street, Billy became one of the most popular boxing showmen in the district, because he adopted the policy giving the fans the best in the market.

Joe Gans.

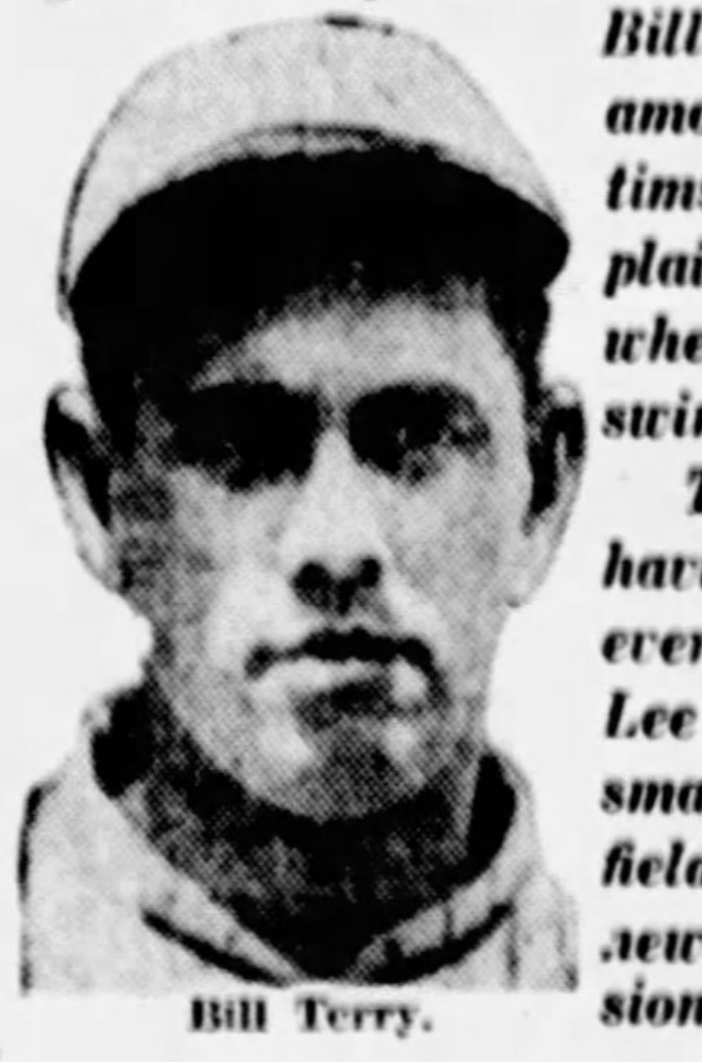
He set about to sign the best fighters that could be induced to perform and how well he succeeded in his endeavor to give his patrons the privilege of seeing the country's best in action may be judged from the number of champions and near-champions that he showed at Kenyon Hall on the North Side, at Central Labor Hall, at the old Bijou Theater, old City Hall in Market street and other places.

AMONG them were Joe Gans, Joe Wolcott, Matty Matthews, Rube Ferns, Tom Couhig, Mike Donovan, George Cole, Sam Langford, Tony Ross, Klondike, Al Kaufmann, Packy McFarland, Al Kubiak, Bert Keyes, Jack Twin Sullivan, Al Palzer and many others who ranked among the leaders of their time.

PITTSBURGH loses one of the oldest sport characters in the the city and one of the most capable and popular boxing men ever connected with the game here in the death of the veteran promoter. Billy was always on the level in his dealings with the public and with boxers, and the game will be kept clean and above suspicion in this section if modern promoters take a leaf from his book and follow the standards he set years ago, both as to quality of attractions and fair-dealings with patrons.

Corcoran leaves two brothers, J. Emmett and Phillip, and one sister, Mary, all residing at 4008 Mifflin street.

LEFTY O'DOUL, who came up and made a hit as a pinch hitter yesterday, is not the only dangerous gun missing from the Giant attack. First Baseman Bill Terry also is out, being included among the New York grippe victims, and you never hear any complaints from the opposing pitchers when Terry is not on the list of swingers.



Bill Terry.

Terry holds the distinction of having driven out the longest hit ever made in Pittsburgh. Against Lee Meadows on June 13, 1925, Bill smashed the ball over the center field fence beyond the end of the new right-field grandstand extension.

THE outlook for the remainder of the series with the Giants became much brighter yesterday, when the condition of both Remy Kremer and Carmen Hill improved to such an extent that Manager Bush now believes he stands a good chance of being able to use both aces during the Giants' stay. Donie had practically given up hope of using either, but both slab stars showed so much improvement yesterday that Donie now figures he can pitch Kremer tomorrow and send Hill to the firing line in the final game Friday.

IT will mean a lot to the Bucs if the two are available though even in their crippled state they have been tearing along at a terrific pace. They won four in a row up to today, their longest winning streak of the season so far, having captured seven of their last eight games and nine of their last 11 battles.

AT the conclusion yesterday of the first four weeks of the season, the National League standing showed one of the closest and most open races in the history of the circuit.

Before the season opened, Manager Bush of the Pirates said that it would not surprise him if no fewer than six clubs were closely bunched as late as July. For the first four weeks at least he surely called the turn, for after yesterday's games the National League race was that close that only one and a half games separates the first and sixth club. That's almost a

HAGEN UP WITH 75; ARMOUR "OUT"

SANDWICH, Eng., May 9. (INS.)—The Eagle fairly shouted its glee today as Wild Bill Mehlhorn and Gene Sarazen finished one-two in the first round of the British open golf championship and Walter Hagen finished in a tie with Archie Compston and George Duncan, Britishers, for fourth position.

Occupying third place at nightfall was Jose Jurado, the little whifet of a man from Argentina. Jurado won the qualifying medal yesterday, thanks to a dazzling 69.

Mehlhorn achieved the pace-setting position by shooting a flawless 71, and Sarazen, valiantly battling a wave of "tough breaks," used up only one stroke more. Jurado was three strokes behind Wild Bill with 74, and Hagen, Compston and Duncan were in good position with 75.

Of the other Americans John McHugh, San Francisco amateur, shot 79; Tommy Armour an 81, Jim Barnes an 81 and Robert Stupple, Chicago professional, 82.

The poor showing of Armour, United States and Canadian open champion, came as something of a shock, as he had been sticking close to par figures in the practice rounds. His poor stroking today practically eliminated him as a title possibility. His card:

Out .... 5 4 2 5 5 5 6 3 5—39
In .... 4 6 4 6 4 5 3 5 5—42—81

MEHLHORN AT BEST

Mehlhorn simply ran riot through the round, approaching with startling accuracy and dropping putts of all sizes and angles. This kind of play carried him to the turn in 35, one over the seemingly immune par for the outgoing nine. By comparison, Sarazen's was a fighting round, for the wind often carried him away from his objective and he had to make startling recoveries to stay near par. In addition, he was none too lucky during the homecoming journey. Hagen's 75 represented what might be termed ordinary, but steady golf. Walter, however, was putting well, as usual.

Mehlhorn lost his direction in the wind at the eleventh, but came back at the twelfth with a vengeance, getting a 3 as a result of a

THE three days' suspension handed Bill McKechnie, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals and former pilot of the Pirates, for his run-in with Umpire Cy Pfirman at St. Louis Sunday, in which the Wilkinsburger is alleged to have used abusive language, recalls to Dick Guy, former local sports scribe and organizer of many leagues, including the Mid-Atlantic and the Pennsylvania, both still in operation, the first time McKechnie was suspended. Guy himself placed that ban on him, and it occurred 'way back in 1906 and for a time raised such a ruction that it threatened the disruption of the old P. O. M. (Pennsylvania, Ohio and Maryland) League, also founded by Guy, along with several associates. Guy was president of the circuit.

GUY in those days was sports editor of the old Gazette, and he steered McKechnie into the latter's first real baseball job with the Butler (Pa.) club. Jimmy Breen of Ashtabula, O., was manager of the Butler outfit and needed a third baseman, in 1905, and called up Dick on the telephone to tell him his troubles. Dick inserted a notice in the paper for McKechnie to come to the office and asked him if he'd like to take a crack at the job. Bill, just a kid, was tickled pink at the offer. He was told there probably wouldn't be much money in the berth and replied that money was no object. He was signed at $65 a month. The next season, Dick placed him with the Washington (Pa.) club of the P. O. M. League, where he developed into the best third baseman in the loop, so that before the end of the second season, which also was the last for the league, he was picked up by John

Miss Ryan Off Team

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—Although official confirmation is still lacking, dispatches announcing that Elizabeth Ryan, veteran California star, had been informed she would not be selected for the American Wightman cup team this year have created little surprise in tennis circles here.

Miss Ryan never has given up her American citizenship, but it was pointed out her continued residence in England would make her selection for the Wightman cup matches somewhat of an injustice to the young stars who make their home here. It was recalled that in 1926, the only year in which Miss Ryan has played for this country in the Wightman cup matches, the Californian previously had returned to the United States and resumed her residence here.

Vic Pickard Breaks Pole Vault Mark

By JESS CARVER.

THE merry gentlemen of Kappa Sigma, Gamma Omega Chapter of the University of Pittsburgh sang with right good will "The Maple Leaf Forever" last night as they gathered around the old baby grand following the evening meal. Why? Well, simply because one of their number, a good man and true, Victor Pickard of Canada, set a new university and tri-state collegiate pole vault record yesterday in the dual meet between Pitt and old Carnegie Tech, clearing the cross bar at 13 feet 1¾ inches, to better his own mark of 13 feet.

Pickard's record shattering vault was the high light of the Panthers' 111-23 victory over the Tartan track and field team. It ranked with Capt. Gibby Welch's splendid performances in the field and Ken Webecan's excellent running. Welch won four first places, taking the discus, shot, broad jump and javelin. Webecan repeated his triumphs of the West Virginia meet last Saturday in the century, furlong and quarter-mile, and came with one-fifth of a second of equaling the local record for the 220.

PITT MAKES SWEEP

The Blue and Gold has now established a supremacy for the year over the Plaid in every branch of sport, making a clean sweep in football, baseball, track, tennis and swimming. But next year is another year, never forget that.

Lockhart, Tech's hurdling captain, was the only Tartan able to score a first, the Skibo leader winning the 220-yard low hurdles in a close race with Knoblock and Voight of Pitt. The Tartans got one first and three second places out of the meet, grabbed off a few thirds and then made plans for next year.

In the freshmen meet, which was run off in conjunction with the

EASY FOR BELLEVUE

A team represented to be the Greensburg team of the Pennsylvania League, but really a picked-up outfit which was to appear under the name of the Collegians, lost, 15 to 3, to the Bellevue team of the County League at Bellevue last evening. Bellevue scored 11 runs in the fourth inning and only five and one-half innings were played. The Greensburg team will not report until the latter part of next week for a series of pre-season games.

PIRATES' WIN STREAK PUTS TEAM AT TOP

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

OUT of first place by the slender margin of one-half a game, the Pirates today were a rollicking crew as they dwelt on the smiles with which fortune has favored them in the past few weeks. It is possible for the Bucs to take the league leadership today.

Less than one month ago the Buccos opened the season under anything but promising circumstances. Coming out of the West and the South with a long string of defeats, the Bushwackers jumped off in St. Louis by taking two running defeats. The remainder of April did not offer anything bright for the club. But look what they

by HARRY KECK
SPORTS EDITOR

McGraw for the New York Giants and was well launched on a varied career which eventually was to set him manager of the world champion Pirates, and, now, leader of a strong contender in the St. Louis Cards.

M'KECHNIE'S run-in that brought his suspension from Guy was with one Bob Black, an umpire. His Umps missed a close one at third base, or at least McKechnie thought he did, and the player did not spare the official in telling him what he thought of him. The umpire did not make a report of the incident, but the manager of the Uniontown club did, and Guy, fearing he would be accused of shielding McKechnie because he had recommended him, promptly notified the Washington club that McKechnie was suspended for one day. Rain prevented the next day's game and the Washington club was jubilant, holding that Bill was eligible for the following day's game. Guy countered with the reply that the suspension was for one playing day. Washington ignored him and used McKechnie the next day, and Guy promptly suspended Bill for a week.

That night McKechnie came into Guy's office and Dick was set for an argument, but instead McKechnie informed him he had come to thank him.

"I wanted to go fishing with Syl Snyder at the Ridge," he said, "and was wondering how I'd be able to get off. Now I'll be able to make the trip."

The Washington club didn't hear of this aftermath until the excitement had cooled off, but meantime it threatened to withdraw from the league. Guy called its bluff and the club stuck.

INCIDENTALLY, the P. O. M. League was one of the best leagues ever organized in this section. It included, besides Washington and Uniontown, Cumberland, East Liverpool, Zanesville, Steubenville, Braddock and Waynesburg. Johnny Bates, later a star outfielder with the Phillies, and Doc Carris, now baseball coach at the University of Pennsylvania, were among the other star players, and Mal Eason and Johnny Mullen were among the umpires.

Big salaries finally caused the breakup of the circuit after the 1907 season. The average salary was $175 to $250 a month for players and at least one received as much as $500, which was important money in those days. McGraw paid $750 for the release of McKechnie to the Giants.

GUY'S recollection of McKechnie's career is that he seldom has been suspended and has gained a reputation for good conduct on and off the field.

"However," he says, "there is plenty of fight in Bill and he can take care of himself when he has to. Very few players ever tried to 'ride' him from his earliest days in the game."

Dick wishes to correct the report that Bill is a Sunday school teacher in Wilkinsburg. He belongs to a Bible class in the Mifflin Avenue M. E. church, however, and is a model Sweet William to the folks of his home town.

PRO STAR TO LEAD FLOOR SQUAD

MACK FLENNIKEN, Geneva football star, and Ken Loeffler, prominent local professional basketball star, have been appointed Geneva College coaches to succeed Alvin (Bo) McMillin, one-time All-America quarterback at Centre College, who recently resigned as athletic director to accept a similar position at Kansas State Teachers College.

Flenniken for the last two years has been a star backfield man on the Covenanter eleven and was regarded as one of the outstanding football players in the tristate district.

Formerly of Centenary College, Flenniken came to Geneva when McMillin first signed his contract as coach, and since then has played an important role in placing the Beaver Falls college on the collegiate football map. Flenniken has been given a two-year contract as football coach, according to an announcement by the Geneva authorities.

The appointment of Ken Loeffler as basketball coach should strike a popular chord in the Beaver Valley, where the former Penn State forward is a prime favorite. Loeffler has been identified with the college and professional sport for a number of years and he is well qualified to direct the activities of a college quintet. His wide experience as a player in both branches of the sport, collegiate and professional, should serve him in good stead.

A native of the Beaver Valley, Loeffler stood out prominently on the Penn State varsity quintet for four years. After graduating Loeffler joined the famous Pittsburgh Morrys, local professional champions, with whom he starred for several years. Last year he was a member of the McKeesport Cyclers and the Morrys, who met the New York Celtics on the Duquesne University floor.

YOU saw probably the youngest infield that ever played for a big league ball club when you looked over the inner defense of the Giants yesterday. The oldest man in it is Travis Jackson, shortstop, who was 24 years old last November; next comes Andy Reese, first sacker pro tem., was 24 years old last November; Third Baseman Freddie Lindstrom was only 22 in November, and Second Baseman Melvin Ott was but 19 in March.

HERB PENNOCK, after winning five games in a row and pitching through every game without relief, saw his streak shattered yesterday, but he again went the distance. At that, George Uhle of Cleveland had to be in shutout form to beat Pennock, and of the four hits made by the Yanks, Herb was credited with two. The victory was the fifth of the year for Uhle, tying him with Pennock, but Sam Gray of the Browns tops them all in both leagues with six wins to his credit.

BUCS MAY COP LEAD

have accomplished in this short part of May!

The Pirates really started their winning advance on the last day of April, for on that date they won their first of three straight games from the Cubs. They followed up by taking three out of four from the Braves and yesterday they trimmed the Giants, 6 to 5, in the first meeting of the season between the heated rivals.

By winning seven out of their last eight games the Buccos have leap-frogged one foeman after another until they have reached a position which allows them to do a little dictating.

MAY COP LEAD

The eventualities necessary to send the Freebooters to the pinnacle before nightfall would be a defeat of the Reds while the Pirates paste the Giants again. The Polo Grounders and Rhinelanders are in a virtual deadlock for the honor position so far as the relative number of victories and defeats are concerned. The Buccos, in third place, are a full game away from the Dodgers, who were trimmed by the Cubs.

The closeness of the race is exemplified in the standings of the first six teams. The Cubs, in the sixth notch, are only one and one-half games from the top. This condition augurs well for a remarkable race.

The debut of the Giants in Pittsburgh was a big artistic success for the Pirates, and it may be said to have been a financial success considering that there were upwards of 12,000 in attendance.

Burleigh Grimes challenged his former mates in the initial clash of the two clubs. The Minerva spitball star finished in front, but he had to have some fine assistance from an unexpected source to accomplish the desired result. Freddie Lindstrom, at third for McGraw, made a couple of errors that were of vital importance to the Buccos. The Pirates won the battle in the second and third rounds, scoring three times in each inning and Lindstrom injected an error into each of the rallies.

GIANT RALLY VAIN

The play of the enemy was characteristic of McGraw's teams. The Giants are never beaten until the last man is out. They rolled into the ninth yesterday with a three-run deficit, but when Pete Scott made a fine running catch to pull down the curtain Eddie Roush was on his way to the home plate with the tieing run.

For a brief moment, Pirate fans feared there would be a collision between Scott and L. Waner which would have deadlocked the contest. But Stockton Pete slipped between Wright and Sprout for a capture of the decisive putout.

Dutch Henry gave the Pirates much trouble after the third frame; in fact the Buccos could not score a single run off the southpaw from the fourth to the finish. The end of the third the Pirates were out in front with a five-run advantage, but the Giants kept pecking away at Grimes until they became dangerous. Luckily their last-minute drive fell short by a run.

Both clubs went into the first game under the handicap of ailing players. McGraw had Bill Terry, Lefty O'Doul and Andy Cohen out of action, although Andy was able to appear for the festivities arranged in his honor. Remy Kremer was due to pitch ahead of Grimes, but the Frenchman reported with a lame foot and could not toil on the slab. Scott continued in left field in place of the injured Comorosky.

Manager Bush has Joe Dawson ready for the second clash this afternoon. The Giants expect to rely on Virgil Barnes, who is due to fling the rocket for their side.

ST. CLAIR CARDS BIG EVENT

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

One of the biggest events of the year for members of the St. Clair Country Club has been slated for Saturday. It will really mark the official opening of the season for the Bridgeville organization. With the anticipation of every member and a number of guests attending, a big day of golf, morning and afternoon, is to be staged with the equal to $1,000 in prizes on hand to be distributed to the winners of the various events.

The big competition of the day, we understand, is to be a dinner match, in which two teams will oppose each other.

St. Clair, with a number of renovations in its clubhouse and many improvements on its course, expects that its first big party will send the club through one of the most successful seasons in its history. The layout is in perfect condition, thanks to Dave Bell, and St. Clair members have good reason to be mighty proud of it.

Dave McCormick, the club's pro, will keep track of the scoring.

GOLF

great iron shot and the sinking of a 25-foot putt. Otherwise, Bill's perfect approaching, long drives and sound putting made his play seem uneventful. He experienced almost no difficulty with the tricky greens, only twice taking as many as three putts.

SARAZEN UNLUCKY

After passing the first turn in 35, Sarazen seemed due for a highly sensational round when he started home 4-4-4. He was doing his scoring in the stiffest kind of going and, while frequently his unfamiliarity with the atmosphere whimsies of the course carried his approaches off line, he invariably followed with a stroke-saving shot.

Luck, however, began to frown upon his efforts, starting with the thirteenth. Here he boomed a terrific tee shot down the wind but when he reached the ball he found it had rolled to a bad hanging lie. A half-topped brassie second was the result. He got another bad lie after hitting a fine drive at the fourteenth but he replied with a terrific brassie. The ball, however, rolled off the green. His immediate reaction was a grand chip shot that netted him a 4.

At the fifteenth, luck turned "heads" for a change, his topped iron shot jumping the traps. He hooked his drive at the home hole but came back beautifully with his approach to the green for a 4.

Sarazen's card:
Out .... 4 4 3 3 4 4 5 3 5—35
In .... 4 4 4 5 4 4 3 5 4—37—72

HAGEN "SOUND"

Hagen's outgoing nine in 37 was sound without being brilliant. Starting for home, he continued to score well, if not sensationally. He got two 4's and a 3 on the first three incoming holes and his gallery began to entertain visions of one of those typical Hagen rushes to the finish. But it was not to be. The Haig, however, supplied a bit of fireworks at both the eleventh and thirteenth. At the former he hit a beautifully crisp iron right on the pin and got a birdie 3 while the thirteenth saw him put his third into a bunker, chip out and then drop a curly 20-footer right into the can. His card:
Out .... 5 4 4 4 3 3 5 4 5—37
In .... 4 3 4 5 5 5 3 4 5—38—75

Johnny McHugh's first nine furnished a sensation. The California amateur was driving a beautiful ball and, once on the greens, he was matchless. In all, he required only seven putts for six holes. However, he began to weaken as he headed for home and the near-collapse of his game was evident to all when he took four putts on the seventeenth green, three of them coming from a distance of three yards.

He missed his tee shot at the eighteenth, shot his second into the rough, chipped beyond the green, back-chipped poorly and altogether manhandled the hole.

Bob Stupple, Chicago, came home with a 41-41—82, while McHugh was weaving in to the finish.

McHugh's card:
Out .... 4 4 3 4 4 3 5 3 5—35
In .... 5 4 5 6 5 4 3 6 6—44—79

Stupple's card:
Out .... 6 5 3 5 6 3 5 3 5—41
In .... 4 5 5 4 5 3 3 5 5—41—82

Among the British players Harry Vardon turned in a 78, Thomas Barber a 77, George Duncan a 75, Jack Hooker, who was paired with McHugh, an 85, and W. L. Hope, first British amateur to finish, an 84.

Jose Jurado, the little Argentine who led the qualifying field with 69 and 75 for a total of 144, continued to play good golf today in the championship proper, going out in 36, one over par.

ST. MARY'S KIRK WINS CHESTER CUP

CHESTER, Eng., May 9.—(AP.)—St. Mary's Kirk, by Sir Douglas, out of Gay Goshawk, owned by Sir Hedworth Meux, won the famous Chester Cup today.

S. Wootton's Dakota was second and A. R. Cox's Gioconda was third. Seventeen ran.

St. Mary's Kirk won by a length and a half while there were three lengths between second and third. The betting was 25 to 1, 100 to 7 and 100 to 8. The stakes were £2,550 with extras and the distance 2¼ miles.

INGOT OUTPUT HITS PEAK

NEW YORK, May 9.—The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade says: Steel ingot production in the first third of the year as forecast by the Iron Age last week established a new four-month record. The nearest approach to the ingot output of 16,846,729 tons in the first four months of this year was a production of 16,521,904 tons in February, March, April and May of 1927.

Output so far in May has shown surprisingly little recession. Chicago mills remain on a 85 per cent basis and average operations in the greater Pittsburgh district, despite a decline at Youngstown, are holding at 80 per cent.

Mill bookings, including specifications against contracts, are not materially smaller than for the first third of April. In fact, at Cleveland, plates, shapes and bars are moving in somewhat better volume.

Aside from further weakness in some finishes of sheets and reductions in basic pig iron at Birmingham, prices have shown little change.

Building activity was fully in keeping with steel production, but automobile output, although virtually equal to that of the first third of last year, fell considerably short of the totals for the corresponding periods in 1926 and 1924.

Depression in the oil fields has been reflected in subnormal purchases of steel, and railroad equipment buying has been in meager volume.

Both of the Iron Age composite prices have dropped this week, that for pig iron reaching a new low point for the year, at $17.50 a ton, compared with a previous low of $17.54 early in January. The finished steel composite has declined to 2.345c a pound, but is still 1½ per cent above the year's low, in January, of 2.314c.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 9.—The cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 7 to 13 points and soon showed net losses of 16 to 22 points under liquidation and local or Wall street selling inspired by relatively easy Liverpool cables and better weather prospects.

May sold off to 21.22 and October to 20.95 under these initial offerings, but the decline was checked by a renewal of the recent demand which probably included some buying on scale down orders as well as covering.

The market later appeared rather nervous and irregular. After the early offerings had been absorbed prices recovered all but 4 or 5 points of their losses, May selling up to 21.37c and October to 21.12c. Another spurt of selling followed the publication of the weekly weather report, which sent the market off several points, but the report contained bullish as well as more favorable features and the decline seemed to bring in renewed buying. At midday the market was comparatively quiet and steady with the active months about 17 to 18 points net lower.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, May 9.—Dry weather complaints from the American and Canadian Northwest, with dust storms in the Dakotas and Minnesota led to early higher prices today for wheat. There were also reports that very low temperatures in Middle Europe are delaying crops. Opening unchanged to 1c higher, wheat later scored upturns all around. Corn was easy, starting ¼c up, but afterwards showing setbacks. Oats were firm. Provisions tended to sag.

At noon wheat was varying from ¼c net decline to ¾c advance and corn was ¼ to ¾c off.

Aside from unfavorable weather in the spring wheat belt, both south and north of the Canadian line, the buying side of the wheat market derived a distinct advantage much of the time today from general belief that the government crop report due after the close would prove bullish. Average unofficial forecasts were that the report would indicate a probable yield of 472,000,000 bushels of winter wheat this season, compared with 552,000,000 bushels last year.

Specific damage reports accompanied in various instances today word of high winds and dry soil in newly sown fields of spring wheat. Particular mention was made of adverse conditions near Fergus Falls, Crookston and Breckenridge, Minn. On the other hand, domestic primary stocks of wheat were reported as being practically double the average at this time for the last 12 years.

The following grain quotations on the Chicago Board of Trade are reported by A. E. Masten & Co.:

Are Lay-Offs 'Heartless'? Teagle Replies to Critic

By B. C. FORBES

TODAY'S column is not written by me, but by Walter C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey.

Fault-finding with our existing industrial order, and with the alleged inconsiderate action of companies laying off men, has been unusually common since unemployment began to attract attention. Many workers manifestly feel that company heads don't care a snap of their fingers as to how many employes are laid off or how unceremoniously they are laid off.

It was a complaint sent to this column which led to Mr. Teagle's illuminating statement.

JAMES B. FURBER, a New Jersey lawyer, had written a letter stating, among other things, that a $25,000,000 Standard Oil loss by fire in China had been described as hardly noticeable" by so rich a company, and that the Rahway plant of Standard Oil had "heartlessly" discharged large numbers of men. Mr. Furber couldn't see why the company could not have changed to four shifts of six hours each," and added:

"One dislikes to continue harping on Rockefeller's Christianity, but how can one believe in a type of Christianity which permits of such methods in the creation of the extravagant dividends which the Standard stocks never fail to render?"

BECAUSE this letter is typical of the mental attitude of many towards corporations, and because there is need, in the interest of fair play and of education, to acquaint the public with the actualities concerning the treatment of their workers by enlightened corporations, I obtained Mr. Furber's permission to submit his letter to Mr. Teagle.

The following statements from Mr. Teagle's reply reveal that all corporations are not heartless. It is because many other organizations are equally considerate that Mr. Teagle's presentation of the facts in this particular case are worth giving at this time when dissatisfaction with "capital" is rather widespread:

"I appreciate the spirit in which you forwarded me the letter of Mr. Furber. I will not attempt a formal reply, as you are undoubtedly capable of presenting these views in more understandable and effective form than I am.

"The facts as Mr. Furber sees them are not the facts that exist, and in saying this I have every sympathy with his point of view, with his feeling for his fellowmen, and with his desire to improve social conditions.

"There is, in fact, no great difference between Mr. Furber's desires and those of the directors of this company, and without seeking praise for our actions, I venture to remind you that we were almost the pioneers in the reduction of working hours; that we have, at considerable cost to our investment shareholders, given thousands of employes their first opportunity to create investments for themselves, and that we maintain sick benefits, death payments and annuities funds.

"We do not claim any virtue for this, but we do regard it as a practical effort for the betterment of a very large number of people.

"THE statement that a loss of $25,000,000 would be insignificant and hardly noticeable to any Standard Oil Company would sound like a witticism if one did not realize that some such notion is held by a great many people. When one remembers that the original Standard Oil Company's existence and growth were made possible entirely by small economies, and when one realizes that the earnings of this company on its invested capital during the past seven years have been only a trifle over 7 per cent, a statement that the loss of $25,000,000, or $25,000, would be hardly noticeable, is manifestly absurd, and I feel that Mr. Furber, on reflection, would agree with me.

"THE laying off of men at the Rahway plant was not done lightly or without grave consideration. It was forced upon us. The men were largely engaged on construction work and the manufacture of equipment. The construction being completed and no further equipment being needed, the situation could not have been solved by reducing the hours sufficiently to keep every man employed.

"I am not sure whether Mr. Furber means that, assuming the continued employment of all the men was possible, they should each receive wages for a full day's work. This, of course, could not be done if this company is to continue in business with other petroleum companies. If his thought is that the aggregate wage bill should be divided among all the men, it would involve a reduction in wages to a large number of them, which would be naturally and properly resented."

THIS corporation head's explanation of how it handled the laying off of men, a matter of very widespread interest to other corporations as well as to workers, will be given tomorrow.

LONE STAR GAS SELLS OFF

Stocks were quiet, but the price tone was steady, during the early trading on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today, Volume of trading was on a lighter scale than either of the two previous sessions of the week,

Standard Sanitary, which has appeared to be under accumulation for the past two weeks, scored a further fractional gain as buyers were forced to raise their offering prices to attract stock. As yet there has been no intimation of when the stock will be listed on the New York Stock Exchange, but the application has been made and announcement of its admission to the list is expected at any time.

Lone Star Gas sagged back slowly as traders indulged in further profit-taking. The rise to the recent high of 54 started from around 48, so there is a fair margin of gain shown on some of the stock purchased for purely speculative purposes.

Miscellaneous manufacturing issues showed no substantial changes from yesterday's figure. Witherow Steel preferred made a small gain, but it was enough to put the stock into new high ground. Westinghouse Air Brake slipped back to a new current low in reflection of the unsettled market in New York.

In the afternoon market Lone Star Gas was dropped down to a low of 51, the bottom figure so far on the current reaction. There was no explanation of the late selling other than the generally weak tone of the oils in New York.

United Engineering was more active and sold at the best price of the month in response to the report that United States Steel is considering the erection of continuous process sheet mills in this district over the patents of the American Rolling Mill Company. Should Steel build these mills, United Engineering will get the erection contract under an agreement it has with Rolling Mill.

Oil Stocks Sell Off.

London sold oil stocks in today's market and there was definite reflection of the movement in the issues on the New York Exchange. Heavy selling was noted in high grade oils and many of them slipped off to levels representing forfeiture of 50 to 75 per cent of the gains recorded on the recent sharp run up in the petroleum division. It was said some of the banks felt the recent bulge was too spectacular and was not warranted by conditions. Quarterly earnings reports coming to hand indicate very poor earnings for the first three months of the year, especially for the producing companies, and it is pointed out that the industry is half way through the second quarter with crude prices still on the bottom. In this connection, it is commented, the second half will be just as bad as the first unless a change in the crude price schedules is made very soon. Refiners and the big "complete unit" companies, such as Texas Corporation, Gulf Oil and the leading Standard Oil organizations, stand to enjoy varying degrees of profit owing to the improved gasoline market, but the oil producers look bad for the quarter.

Oil Industry's New Problem.

The Lamp, company organ of Standard Oil of New Jersey, says the oil industry today faces a new set of conditions in which the problem is not one of meeting demand, but of taking care of over production. The high records of production and consumption will be made, but the latter will not gain in the old ratio because of new and efficient use of the products. In respect to the most important product, gasoline, the development and sale of higher compression motors, which will require considerably less fuel per mile, is just fairly started. This will allow for a large increase in the number of motor cars without corresponding increase in consumption of gasoline. "Without making it a prediction," the Lamp says, "it may be said that indications are that this year's total increase in consumption will not exceed 5 per cent, and that this is a fair estimate for the average rate of yearly increase for the next five years." In 1927, world crude production was slightly above 1,250,000,000 barrels and consumption about 1,180,000,000 barrels.

Japanese Yen Under Pressure.

The Chino-Japanese disturbances centering about Tsinan-Fu in East Central China had their reflection in the financial markets today when the Japanese yen suffered a big drop in the foreign exchange dealings in New York. Chinese commercial interests sold the yen heavily and there was also some speculative selling on the theory of possible long drawn out difficulties or formal warfare between the two countries. Chinese currency, on the other hand, was strong, influenced mainly by the strength in the silver market.

Little River Pact Unanimous.

Oil operators in the Little River pool of the greater Seminole district, Oklahoma, have reached an agreement to extend the curtailment pact which expires next Tuesday. One company which had refused to go along on the proposition to hold down the production was reported in Tulsa dispatches to have agreed today, making the program unanimous. Little River is said to have a potential production of 200,000 barrels a day as compared with current production for the whole area of about 275,000 barrels a day under present output schedule.

Middle States Improving.

Middle States Oil had a substantial increase in net operating income in 1927, according to a report filed yesterday by the receivers, Joseph P. Tumulty and Joseph Glass. Official figures were not issued, but were indicated to have made a very favorable comparison with the previous year. The receivers have liquidated claims amounting to $1,808,033 against Middle States Oil and its affiliated companies. After payment of these claims there remained $2,983,458 unexpended income as of December 31, 1927. The receivers said that they expected their next report would be their final one, and added: "The oil industry has passed through a period of very severe depression since the last report, a condition which, while it still exists, appears now about to change for the better. Fortunately, by reason of the Seminole development, the Middle States companies have been able to survive this period and to emerge in better condition than they ever have been in during receivership, with complications practically removed and with increased bank balances, increased acreages and increased production."

Although there has been some talk of improvement in foreign business accounting for the recent strength in International Combustion Engineering, students of the market maintain that the advance recorded has been at the expense of a sleeping short interest which has been run to cover. Pierce Oil Corporation.

Pierce Oil Corporation, a holding company whose chief assets are 1,103,411 shares of Pierce Petroleum Corporation stock out of 2,500,000 shares outstanding, had no income for the quarter ended March 31, 1928. It is entirely dependent for its income on dividends paid by Pierce Petroleum Corporation, which to date has not declared a dividend. Pierce Oil Corporation's balance sheet starting 1927 showed $9,638,773 deficit. Cash stood at $1,747. Common stock outstanding consists of 1,182,800 shares of $25 par preceded by $15,000,000 preferred. On the latter about 50 per cent dividends have accumulated. Over 10 years, 1917-1926, an aggregate deficit of $1,180,000 is shown by combined figures of the two companies. Pierce Petroleum, which operates the property, is a refining and marketing company with limited crude production. On this account it can show little or no profit when crude oil prices are high. Under prevailing low prices for crude and more favorable gasoline prices it is in position to show some earnings.

MARKET DRIFTS LOWER UNDER PRESSURE

NEW YORK, May 9.—(AP.)—High money rates continued to cast a shadow over today's stock market, which drifted lower under heavy selling for both accounts. Early declines ranged from 1 to 9 points, but a partial recovery took place in the afternoon when a large supply of out-of-town funds, attracted by the 6 per cent call money renewal rate, began to make its appearance. Trading showed a further contraction in volume, although the ticker was again unable to keep pace with the market.

Veteran traders recalled that today was the anniversary of the "Northern Pacific panic," which culminated the big "bull" movement in 1901. The fact that recent price gyrations closely resembled those which preceded the crash 27 years ago is believed to have inspired some liquidation by superstitious traders. Fears of an increase in the New York Federal Reserve Bank rediscount rate tomorrow also were a factor in the selling movement.

Termination of the negotiations for a merger of the Coca-Cola and Canada Dry Ginger Ale companies was followed by heavy selling of both stocks, the former dropping 8½ points and the latter 7¼. Rubber shares turned heavy on the prediction of Harvey S. Firestone that tire prices would be cut within three months, although it was expected that several of the large producers would be able to work off their high inventories before the cut became effective.

Sharp declines took place in such Radio, General Electric, International Telephone and the airplane stocks. Freeport Texas broke 4 points in further reflection of a poor first quarter report. Heavy profit-taking also forced recessions of 1 to 3 points in a number of the public utilities.

Oil shares were adversely affected by another large increase in crude oil production last week and steels were inclined to heaviness on reports that commodity prices had developed a softening tendency.

Pool operations were not entirely abandoned, however. American Bank Note and Lambert were each bid up about 5 points to new high records, and a number of other specialties moved up 1 to 3 points.

Delaware and Hudson broke down more than 4 points, presumably in reflection of speculative disappointment over President Loree's failure to announce a disposition of the $63,000,000 received by the road for its Wabash and Lehigh Valley holdings. New York Central was bid up more than 3 points and was accompanied into new high ground by Wabash, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Reading.

Marion Davies in "The Patsy"

Are You the Little Patsy at Home?

ARE you the little Cinderella in your home—the one who always has to take the back seat for the big sister—who never has a boy friend—who never gets a chance at the parlor sofa or the porch swing?

That's the role Marion Davies plays in this picture. That is, for a while, until she gets wise to herself and cuts loose with Leap Year and some brand-new, love-making tricks. It's a riot of love and laughter by the screen's grandest feminine funster.

Better than "THE FAIR CO-ED!"

Nothing to Brag About

Emily—"I am the happiest woman in the world. I am marrying the man I want."

Winnie—"Oh, that's nothing. True happiness comes to a girl by marrying the man somebody else wants."

Proof

"That man cheats," said a golfer, as he entered the club house. "He lost his ball in the rough and played another ball without losing a stroke."

"How do you know he didn't find his ball?" asked a friend.

"Because I've got it in my pocket."

All Exposed

Difficult Parent—"I am not satisfied with my son's report of his French. I am a handwriting expert and can see from your writing that you cannot bear my son. That will surprise you?"

Teacher—"No, I am a handwriting expert myself and I can see from your son's writing that his father is a perfect ass."—Der Wahre Jakob, Berlin.

Saving His Feelings

"Walter, my bill says 14 kroner instead of 13."

Canada's Wise Plan

Pity We Haven't Plans Like It.

In Canada, as in the United States, millions of acres of land lie idle. But, unlike ourselves, the Canadians realize that the real wealth of a nation is ambitious population and they don't intend to leave their lands idle if they can help it.

Canada's government is now considering a plan that originated in Vancouver to add 2,000,000 to Canada's population, and at the same time make it possible for the 2,000,000 to cultivate and eventually own 50,000,000 acres of land.

Canada would not leave these people to shift for themselves, as this country leaves its homesteaders, to break their hearts trying to dig down to water and trying to keep alive while working to make their lands pay.

The people of Canada would contribute $300,000,000 to make the plan a success, advancing the money $30,000,000 a year, for ten years.

Land owners would have thirty years in which to repay government advances, with interest, in annual instalments of $114.75. Then each man would own his land, and the government would have its money back.

Fifty million acres now idle would be adding to Canada's wealth, and 2,000,000 of new landing, ambitious, and prosperous population, would be added to Canada's power.

Here we are busy keeping out the population that the country needs, on the ground that it means ''competition'' with Americans already here.

What about fifty years ago, or a hundred years ago?

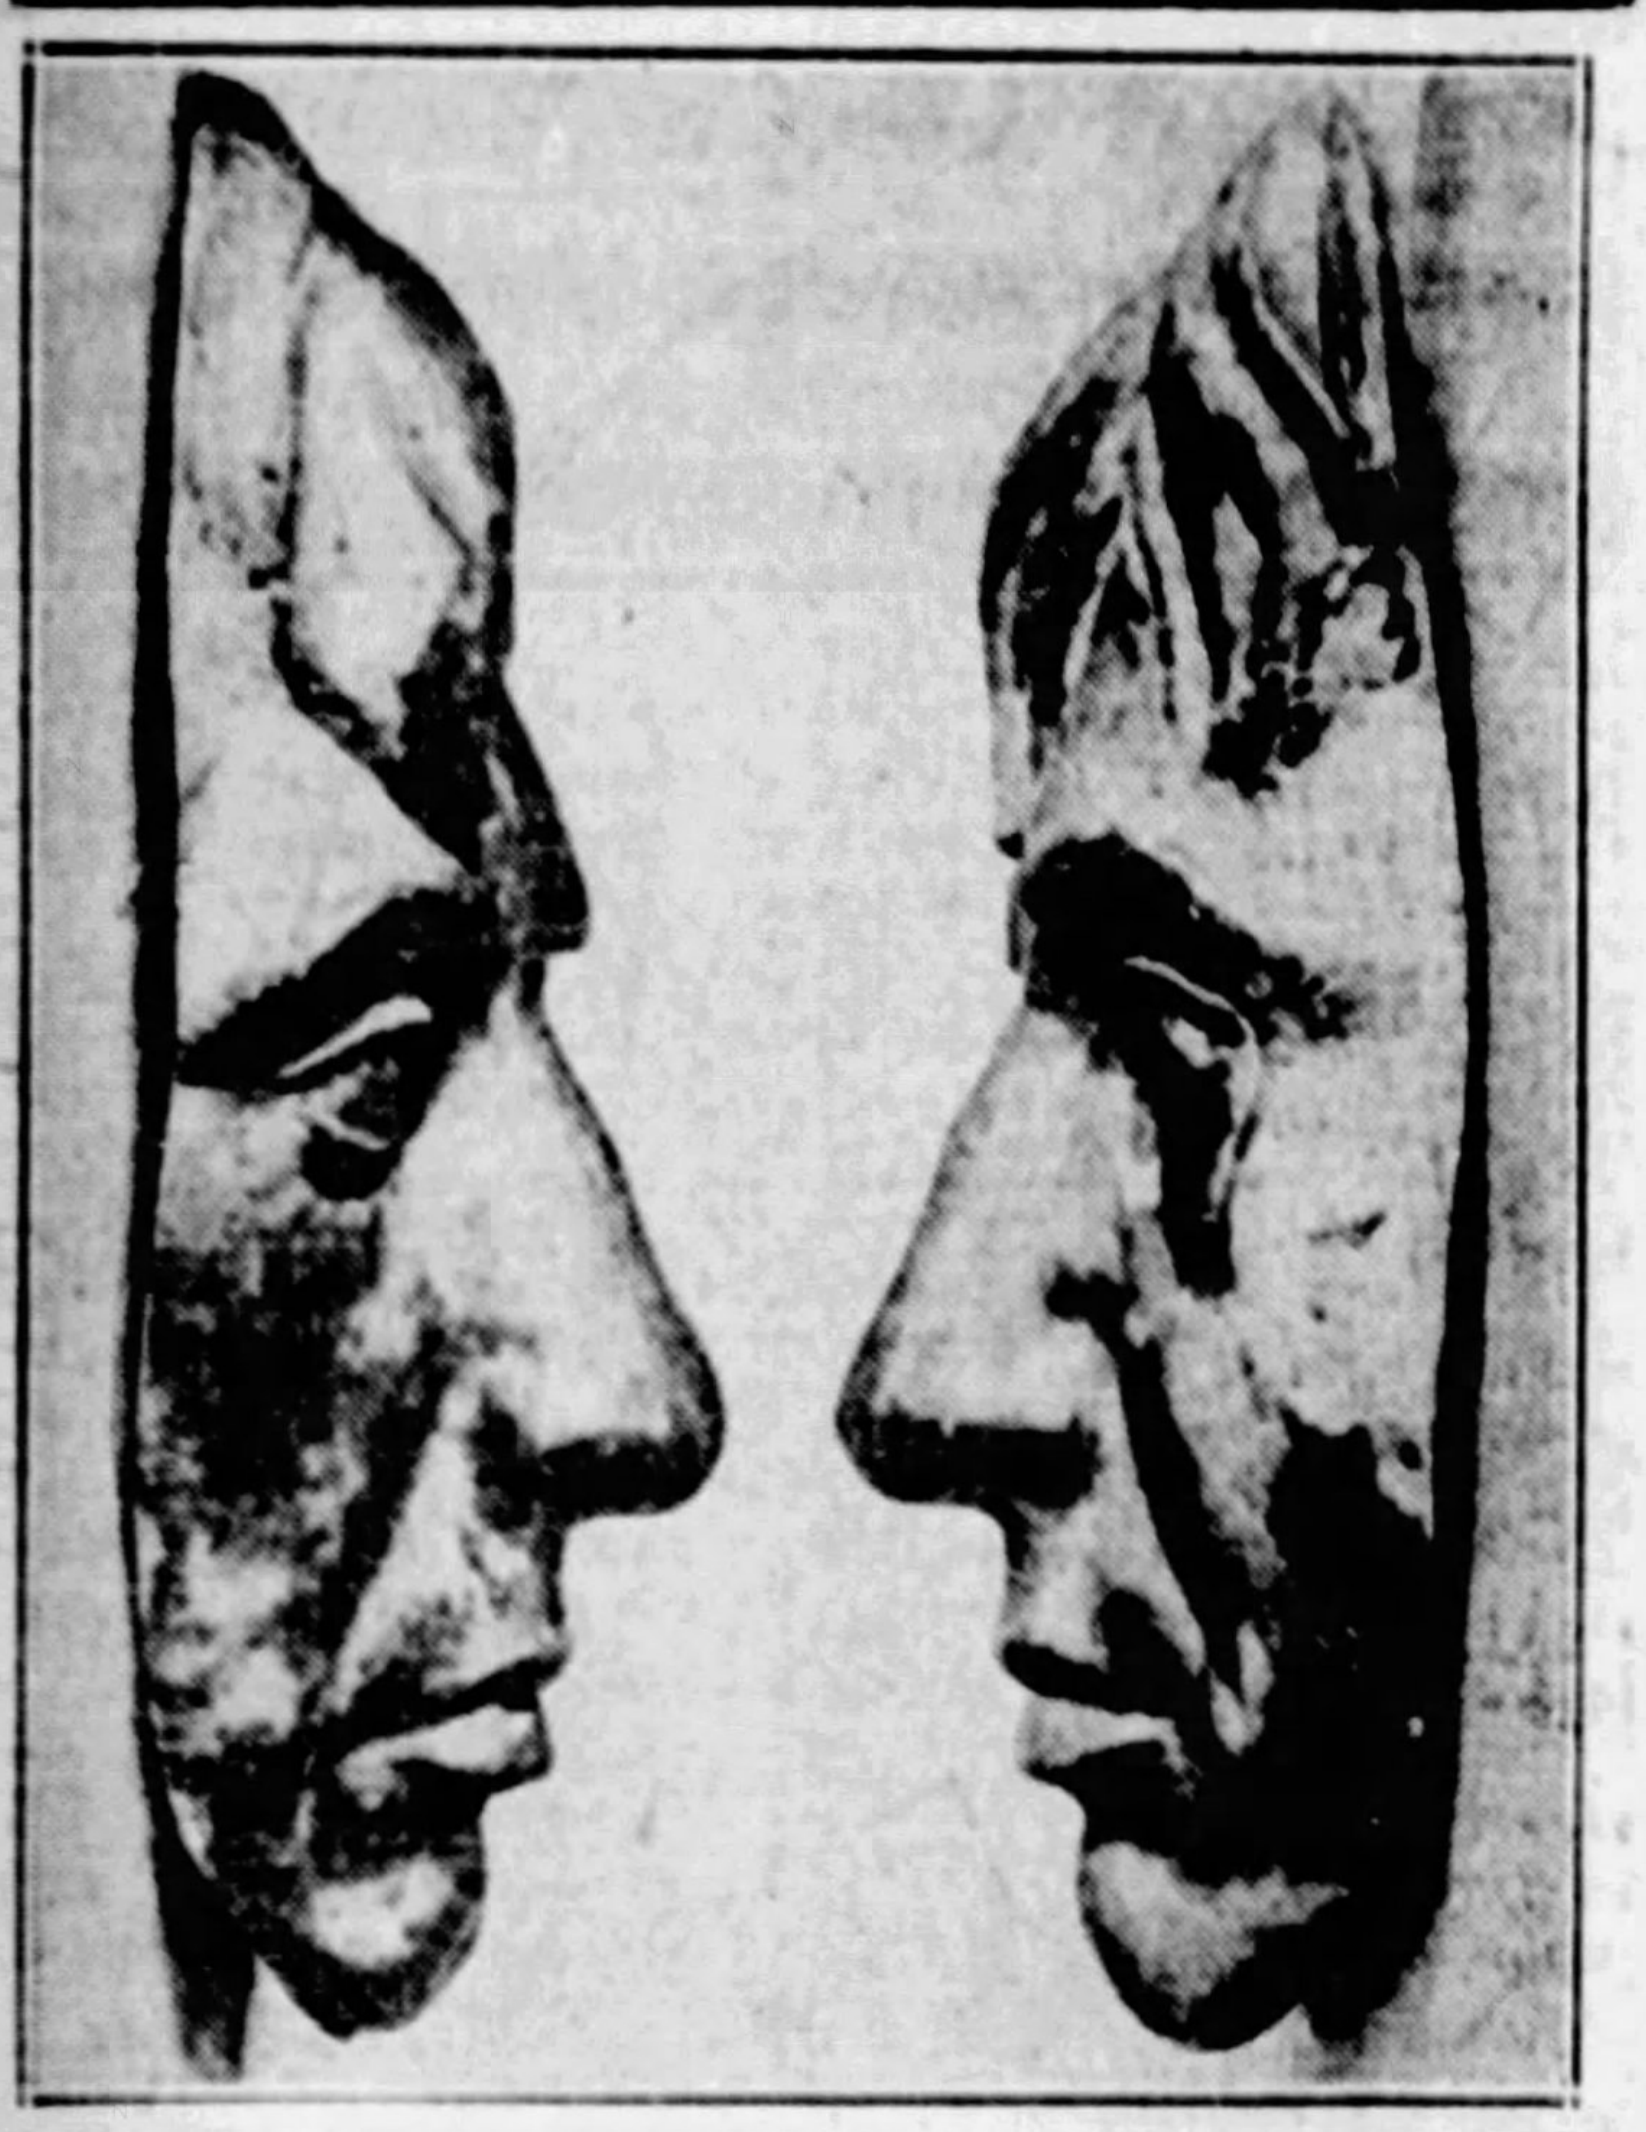
Every man in the United States today earns more money than he could possibly have earned when the population of this country was 4,000,000 instead of 120,000,000.

There is no wealth but intelligent population.

And this country, which owes all of its success, wealth and power to good immigration from Europe, now keeps out that immigration, while millions of acres go uncultivated.

Nelson's Death Mask

This ACTUAL FACE of a Great Sea Fighter Will Interest You



THE DEATH MASK OF LORD NELSON, GREATEST BRITISH SEA FIGHTER.

When Nelson, greatest sea fighter in England's history, lay dead aboard his flagship, the Trafalgar, his death mask was taken. These pictures show his profile as seen from the left and right sides. As everyone knows, the two sides of the human face are different. The differences here are interesting.

But, most interesting, you see here the face of one of the GREATEST MEN in history as it actually was.

Now Lord Nelson lies in solemn grandeur, with the Duke of Wellington close by him, each in a massive stone tomb under the dome of St. Paul's.

Fortunately for these men, their day is ended, their fame is secure as long as English history shall be read on the earth.

Well might Nelson say, as he fell mortally wounded to the deck, "Thank God, I have done my duty!"

Happy all of those that can say the same, no matter what their work, or where their lives have led them.

DO YOUR DUTY until death makes you forever safe from reproach.

There is no greater possible human accomplishment.

For some the duty is modest, and the world never hears of it. For others it may mean, as in Lincoln's case, the saving of a nation; and for others, as in Nelson's and Wellington's cases, the beating off of foreign foes.

But do your duty, then die. THAT is the happy death.

Ballasts of Democracy

The Duchess of Athol, distinguished visitor to America, wonders what will happen to Britain when 5,000,000 more women get the ballot, giving women voters 2,500,000 plurality over English men.

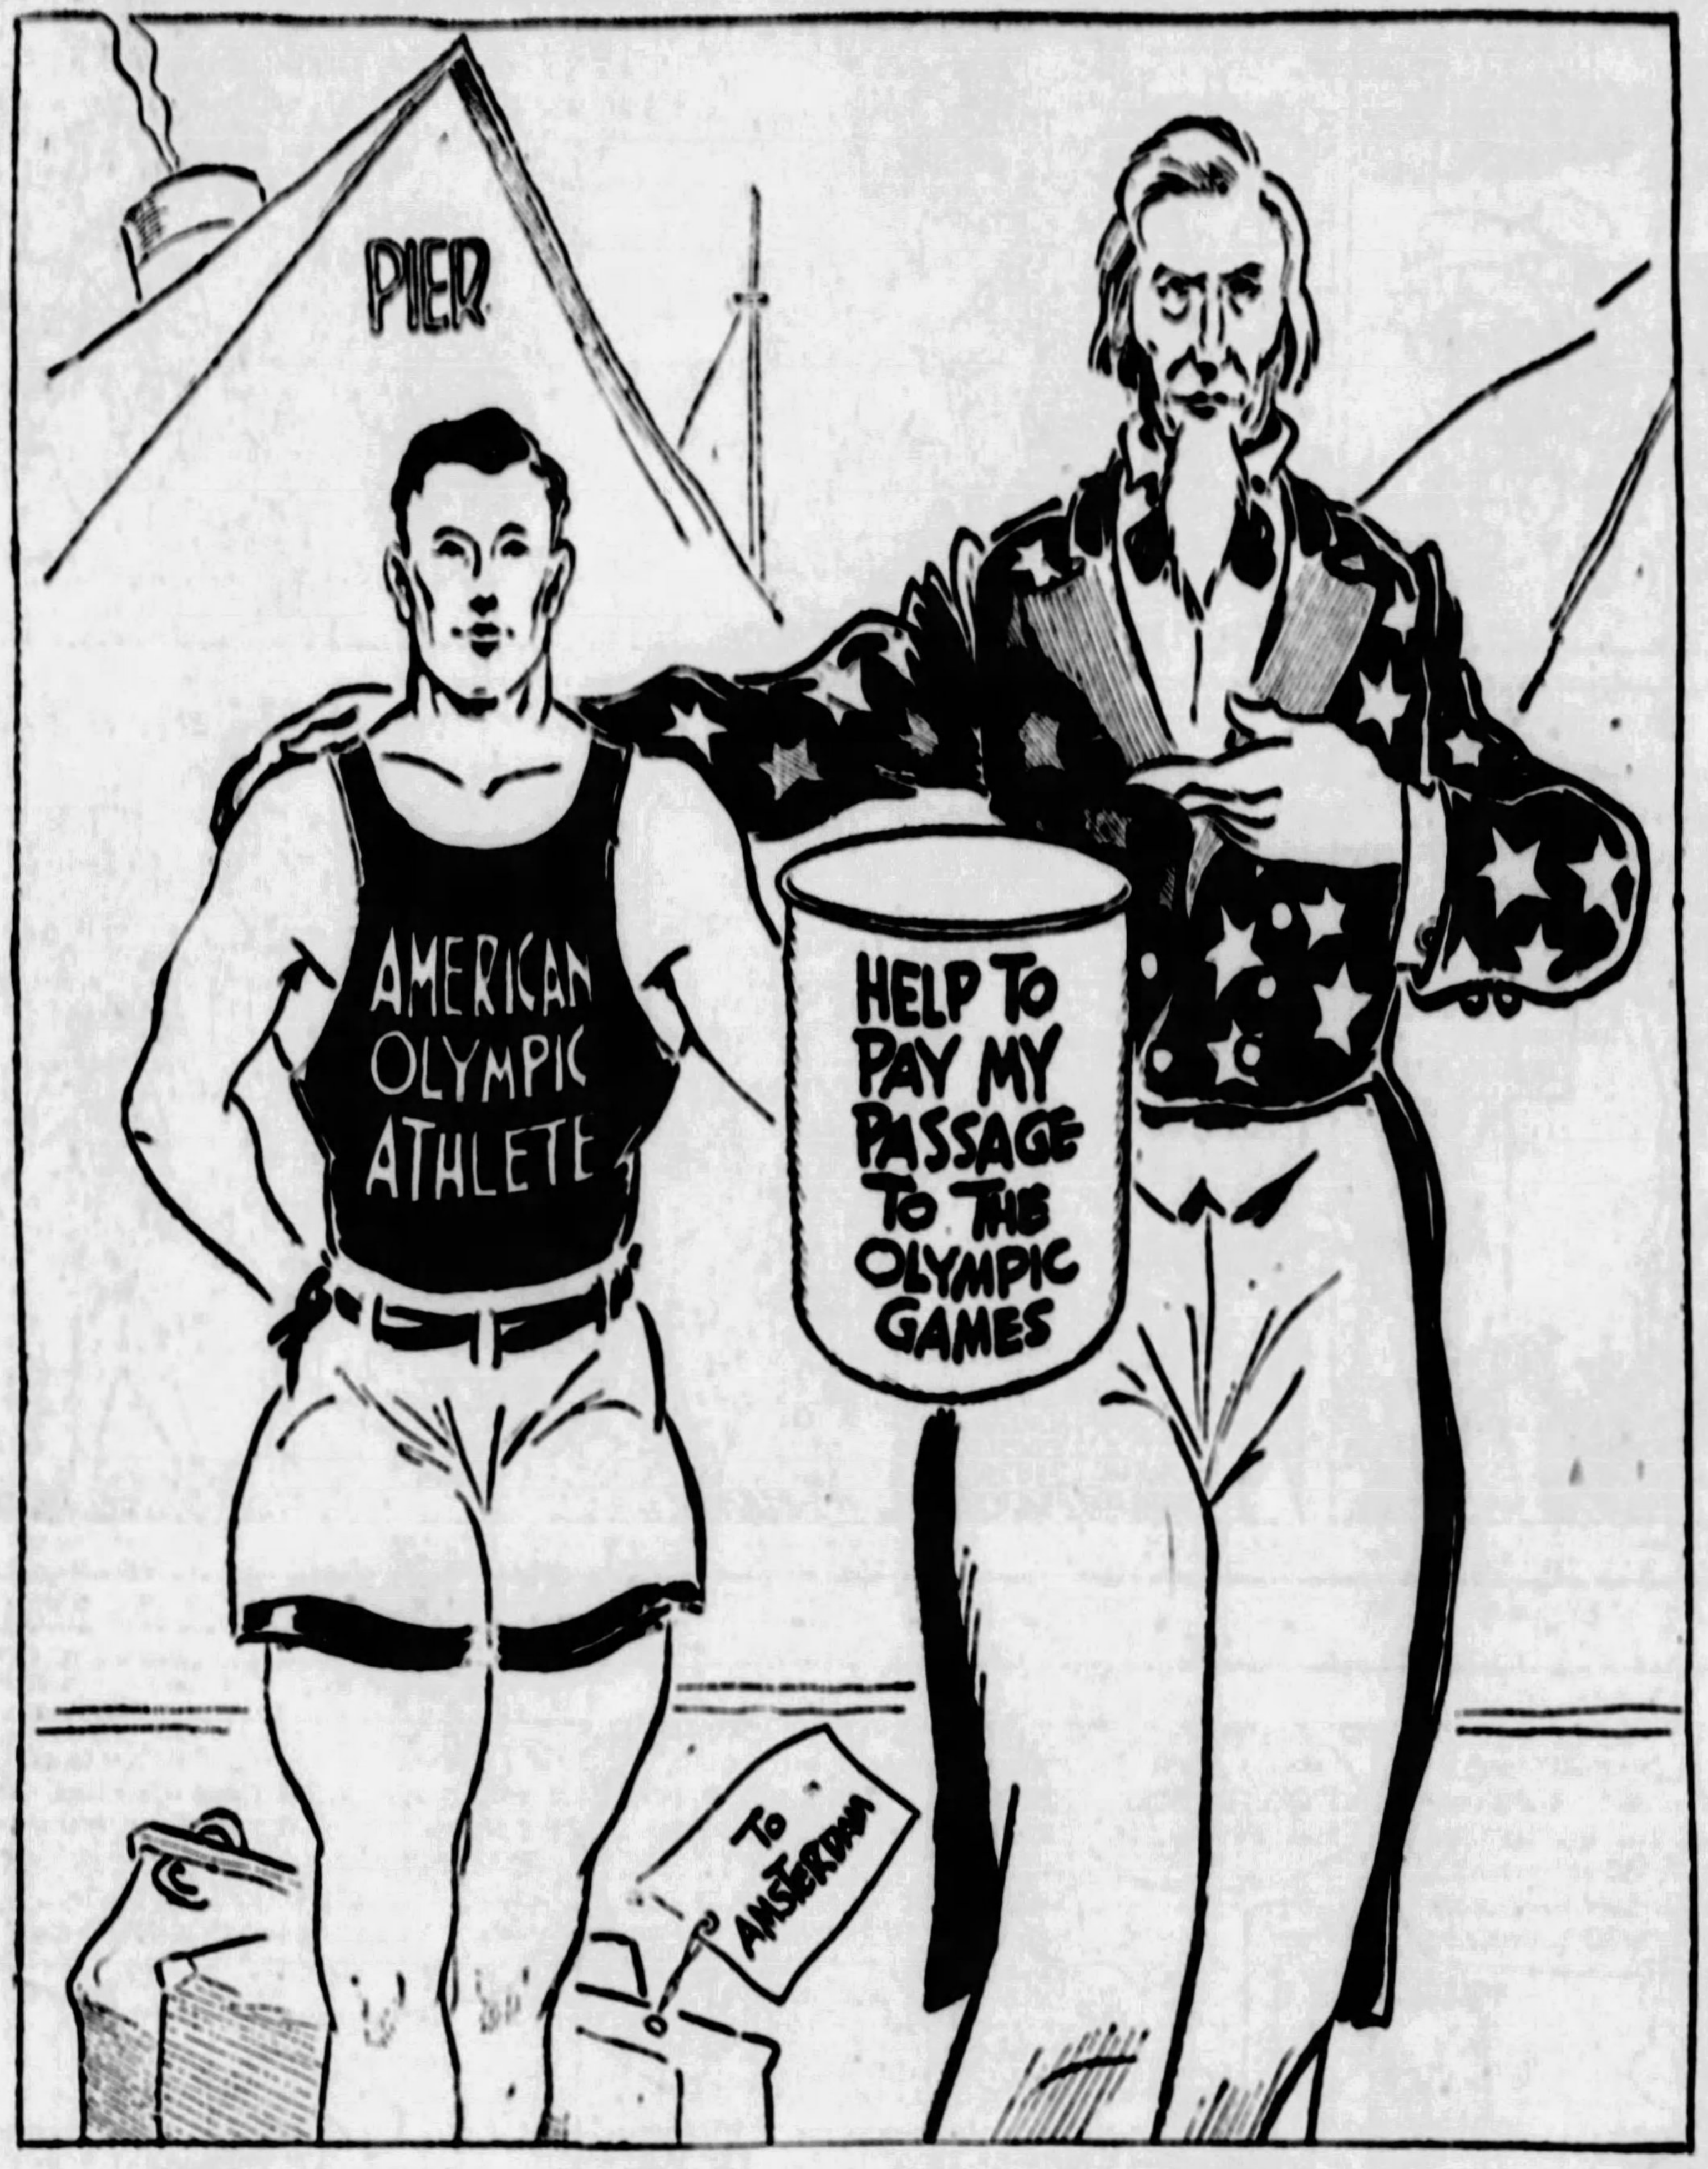
Probably nothing unusual. Galusha A. Grow, author of the Homestead Act which built up the West, once answered the Duchess' doubts.

''In a democracy,'' he said, ''the vote of one ninny cancels the vote of another and the collective good sense decides.''

Japan has put 9,000,000 novices on the voting roll and the government at Tokio still lives.

Education and leadership—these are the essentials.

NOT CHARITY—A DUTY!



There is no need to argue the importance of American participation in the Olympic games.

The country cannot be represented properly unless the $400,000 expense fund to be raised by public subscription is paid in. Pittsburgh's quota of the total is $6,500.

The money should be raised in a short time.

Pittsburghers intensely interested in athletics are counted on to do their part before sailing day of the Olympic contenders, which is not far away.

A local committee under the chairmanship of J. Rogers Flannery is planning the gathering of the fund needed. Contributions may be sent to the treasurer of the fund, Harrison Nesbit, Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Santa Clara Astronomy

IN THE recently flood-swept and quickly resurgent Santa Clara Valley in California dwells an amateur astronomer who has awakened among the prune growers of that fertile spot of earth a deep interest in the stars. From Mount Hamilton the great dome of the Lick Observatory looks down upon his home, and its telescopes might have watched the boiling waters turning the gold-green valleys into a scene of desolation as they swept past his door. His name is Charles Edward Barnes, and a little book, written, set up, illustrated and printed—all with his own hands—has come into my possession. It is called, no more romantically than its deserts warrant, "One Thousand and One Celestial Wonders as Observed with Home-Built Instruments."

For its author is not only a star-gazer, but a constructor of telescopes, as of books, with his own hands, working from foundation up. That was Galileo's way, because in Galileo's time there was no one to make telescopes for him. It was Newton's way and Herschel's way. It is still the way of a few men, a very few, like Charles Edward Barnes, even in this telescope-making age, because the joy of constructing the instrument is only second to that of using it.

Mr. Barnes makes telescopes of both kinds, i. e., reflectors and refractors—not, as far as I know, to sell them—and he freely gives away the whole process in his book, and shows how to test the work. After all, it is only a matter of patience, of great carefulness, of exquisite delicacy of touch and critical judgment of the eye—plus an internal urge to reach the stars on one's own wings. His book, so suggestive in its title of the "Arabian Nights," indicates why he has successfully intoned the call of the stars to the Santa Clara fruit growers.

The great observatories crown lonely mountain-tops now because there they are in a purer and often steadier air, but astronomy in its untechnical aspects remains democratic and consociative, and dwells in the plains, and the valleys, where people live in close touch with nature and see the stars sparkling through garden trees or burning like signals over the bordering mountains. It was so in old Egypt, it was so in ancient Chaldea, where we almost think that astronomy began.

California has doubly proved itself the golden land of astronomy. It has twice led the world with great telescopes—first with the Lick giant which, it seems but yesterday, was a marvel to mankind; now with the greater giants that tower and point heavenward further south. That it should be also par excellence a land of amateur astronomers is a manifest prescription of nature.

My Santa Clara amateur gives a quotation from Plato which seems to be worth wide reading:

"He who has not contemplated the mind of nature in the stars, harmonizing them with laws and institutions, is in nowise able to give a reason for such things as have a reason; and he who is unable to acquire this addition to ordinary virtues as a citizen can hardly hope to become a leader, but must forever be subordinate to others."

At least we all know the marvellous steadying power that contemplation of the starry heavens exercises over the soul.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

Cheerfulness an Asset

PEOPLE meet you in about the way you impress them.

What you get from others is nearly always a reflection of yourself.

It is difficult to meet a man with a smile and not smile back.

And if you are irritable and displeasing, you may expect to receive something of this sort from those with whom you associate.

The reason we find so many grouches in this world is because we are grouchy ourselves.

You may be afflicted with physical and mental troubles but why make others suffer from your indisposition?

Practically all of us have disturbing things to contend with.

The world does not care one whit about your troubles.

People associate with you for the pleasure you can give them.

If you are cheerful and optimistic and can impress people with your hopeful attitude, you make them feel better and they want your society.

Cultivate a cheerful countenance.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

The Fortune Teller

SHE peers in your hand at the lines drawn there
And tells of the days to be,
Reading your future, if dark or fair,
Your sorrow or ecstasy.

Can it be true that the coming years
Keep guard over deeds unborn?
Do they wait there changeless, your hopes and fears,
For the light of a destined morn?

Still, go not like a puppet to face the fate
That the sibyl foresees for you,
For, whatever the shapes that in shadow wait,
You can meet them as brave men do.

Words of the Wise

The diminutive chains of habit are seldom heavy enough to be felt until they are too strong to be broken.—Johnson.

A crowd is not company, and faces are but a gallery of pictures, and talk but a tinkling cymbal, where there is no love.—Bacon.

First must give place to last, because last must have his time to come; but last gives place to nothing, for there is not another to succeed.—Bunyan.

Story-telling is subject to two unavoidable defects—frequent repetition and being soon exhausted; so that whoever values this gift himself has need of a good memory, and ought frequently to shift his company.—Swift.

Tales that are Told

Natural Causes

AN ENGLISHMAN and a Scotsman were out shooting. The Englishman was a notoriously poor shot, and the Scotsman decided to make a little money at his expense.

"Look here, George," he said, "I'll bet you a fiver you can't shoot anything over two hundred yards away and kill it."

"Righto," replied George. "I'll take that on."

Glancing round for a target, he saw a crow flying overhead. After taking careful aim, he pulled the trigger. A cloud of smoke, and the bird fell dead at the Scotsman's feet.

"There!" cried the Englishman, exultantly, "that makes me a fiver the richer!"

Sandy was crestfallen. Then his face lit up.

"But, mon," he exclaimed, "you dinna win the bet. A fall from that height would kill any bird."—London Tit-Bits.

Too Open

A MAN had invited a business acquaintance to play a round of golf with him. The guest, a very pompous individual, was also a poor player, and hacked up the turf with each stroke.

After he had carried away an unusually generous portion with his iron, he turned to his host and said:

"You know, I don't care particularly for the game, but I like the glorious open country hereabouts."

"Ah, quite," replied the other, as he surveyed the scarred ground, "but do you mind closing up the open country as we go along?"

Doleful Diet

A NAVAL coxswain had the misfortune to run his picket boat into a trawler at anchor.

Knowing himself to be in the wrong, he listened with disciplined patience while the irate master expressed his views on naval picket boats in language the reverse of polite.

Then the coxswain pushed off, but as he passed under the stern of the trawler he looked up at one of the crew leaning over the rail and inquired, casually:

"I say, what do you feed your old man on? Acid drops?"—London Tit-Bits.

Running No Risks

A SOCCER match was to be played between two amateur clubs who were old rivals. In fact, this particular match was always inclined to be like a dog-fight. The referee, however, did not turn up and the rival captains set about the task of finding a substitute.

They saw in the crowd one who they imagined would fill the bill.

"I say," said the home skipper, "you know enough about football to referee this match, don't you?"

"More than that," replied the spectator. "I know enough not to referee it."—London Tit-Bits.

Just in Time

THE carpenter had left the gas turned on in his shop, and on entering the following morning the first thing he did was to strike a match.

There was a terrific explosion and the carpenter found himself in the street again.

A passer-by rushed to his assistance, and after helping him to his feet inquired if he were injured.

The carpenter gazed at his shop, which was now burning merrily, and said:

"No, I'm not hurt; but I got out only just in time."

Aid the Living

THE decision of the Public Schools' Athletic League of New York to erect in honor of its founder, Gen. George W. Wingate, a memorial "for the continuing and lasting benefit of the living" is doubly notable.

The memorial is to be in the form of a $500,000 fund to place on a basis of permanency the athletic activities among New York's more than a million school children, to which Gen. Wingate devoted a quarter of a century of his fruitful life.

That will directly and greatly benefit the living.

New York Day by Day

by O.O. McINTYRE

New York, May 9.—Every ocean liner has a nobody traveling incognito for the sole purpose of attracting attention. In the majority of instances it is the son or daughter of some illustrous millionaire who would never be heard of save for papa's jack.

Among all New York's publicity seekers there are few so eager for the spotlight as those who have been afforded every advantage, but who cannot even do a good card trick. Keen realization of their inadequacy seems to overwhelm them.

Hundreds go in for a new wrinkle in art and give it the quaint name of ''self expression.'' An abused term. Singing in the bath is self expression, but is it art? Some outfit grotesque studios in Greenwich Village, and invite the soul-hungry to sit about on the floor in the sputtering candle light.

Still others take up sculpting. So few know anything about the technique of this art that it offers a convenient camouflage for mediocrity. Others dabble in literature, sending sonnets and prose to ultra journals, often written by ghost writers.

Genius does not always flower in poverty. Innumerable sons and daughters of the rich have stepped out and carved niches for themselves. Not all the society ladies are being blindfolded to show the world in advertisements they recognize instantly their favorite cigaret.

Yet it does seem those handicapped by a lack of advantage are more likely to etch their names on the immortal scroll. There were in the past year some 20 exhibitions at private galleries of the work of attention-attracters, and they didn't mean a thing.

There are violin, piano, voice and cello recitals at public halls almost every month which are filled for the one evening by friends, but nothing is heard of the "artists" again. The stage and movies, too, have claimed their quota of socially rich who expected to topple stars from their thrones. But didn't.

Three foreign journalists arrived in New York recently to fathom the undercurrents of Broadway and find whatever meaning there is for civilization imprisoned there. The Broadway of popular imagination has no more significance than other high-living sections, whether they be in Shanghai or Indianapolis. Generally speaking, it is a highball and a headache and a resolve to be a better boy.

It is said Sinclair Lewis has planned to write shortly a book whose theme is to show what makes Broadway tick. A difficult subject, and no novelist has been able to make much success of the idea. Perhaps the real Broadway is not half so glamorous as pictured.

* * *

Washington Square, Gramercy Park, Fifth avenue, Wall street and the Bowery have been successfully novelized, but when writers tackle Broadway their efforts somehow fizzle. Tawdriness peeps through the glitter, just as Broadway does in actual life.

* * *

It was not until the play, "Broadway," came along that the White Way was successfully dramatized, and yet that production offered only sinister phases of the cabaret life that sprung up after prohibition. It in no wise portrayed Broadway as a whole.

* * *

Broadway is tricky to write about because of its amazing contrasts. Call it hard-boiled, and you will be embarrassed the next day by some mawkish sentimentality. Picture it a road to the bow-wows, and you will be confounded by an army of those who have risen to high place from its gutters.

* * *

At lunch a man at the next table seemed thoroughly discouraged by his domestic outlook. He related tales of wifely nagging, scolding and perpetual fault-findings. In my mean cynical way I wondered how long he had known the other girl.

Evolution Going on Now!

By DR. FRANK CRANE

Most of us think of evolution entirely in terms of the past. It is usually discussed as a method by which the world was formed or mankind was created, or a theory of whether or not we descended from an ape.

It is hardly ever discussed in terms of the future. What will man become? What kind of a creature will man be 10,000 years from now? Will he probably be as superior to us as we are ahead of the cave man?

Horace Bushnell, in his memorable address on ''The Power of an Endless Life,'' showed the amazing possibilities of the effect of cumulative years upon a growing organism, such as man.

Dr. R. A. Milliken, who discovered the "cosmic ray," which has since been called the Milliken ray, in a remarkable address the other day referred to the radio active processes of the world by which heavier atoms are being disintegrated into lighter ones. In other words, somewhere in the universe there is a building-up process going on to replace the tearing-down process represented by radio activity.

Dr. Milliken's experiments constitute the first discovery of evidence which warrants the belief that there is continuous creation.

That there is destruction and that there is death and dissolution are well-known facts.

We are now facing the new fact that there is constant creation!

Evolution is a slow process. Its field lies perhaps in that sub-microscopic world of atoms and electrons. Now that we are beginning to peer a little into the mysteries of that world, we are coming upon a law of tremendous importance.

And this law is that man not only stands at the summit of created things, but that all evolution is going forward.

Man is improving. By his increase of knowledge he is adapting himself more and more for this terrestrial habitat.

Life in any case remains a mystery, but the most remarkable thing about life is not its cessation but its quality of resurgence. Every spring brings with it the upspringing and newness of life.

John Fiske said that the essential quality of man is his improveableness. That quality is emphasized by this new aspect of continuous evolution.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I Don't Want to Be Understood

ELLEN'S taking on because she "isn't understood."

Her family didn't understand her. Her teacher didn't understand her. Her Girl Friend didn't understand her. And now, after three months of married life, she has discovered that her husband doesn't understand her. And she's all broken up over it.

"I thought that at last I had found someone who could understand my every mood," she sighs. "I am a very sensitive person. I have the blues terribly. Then I get those quiet spells when I think and think for hours at a time. It's terribly hard to have a disposition like that. You need someone that is sympathetic around you, and I thought Allen would be. He was perfectly lovely at first, but lately, he's changed so. Why, he flies off the handle at the least little thing and he hasn't a bit of patience with me. He expects me to be smiling all the time. Sometimes when I think of going on like this for years and years I want to die. I wonder if you are sympathetic, Miss Robinson? Sometimes I don't think you are, the way you write. But maybe you don't show your real self in your writing. I do wish you would try to help me. What would you do if your husband didint understand you?"

What would I do?

I'd go out and turn cartwheels of joy. For the last thing I want, is to be understood by husbands or any other members of the human tribe. However, I can appreciate your yearnings, sister. The first 20 years of my life I also spent in peeving because no one understood me. The subsequent time I have consumed in thanking God that they didn't. And praying they won't start. For believe me, girlie, if we were really understood we'd be just about as popular as a good, lively dose of bubonic plague.

When you come to consider it, this craving for understanding is one of humanity's silliest indoor sports.

In the first place, why should folks understand us?

And even if they were willing to do so, how could they?

How can anyone understand us when we can't even understand ourselves?

As things now stand, we know a whole lot more about sheep dip and soda biscuits than we do about the human soul. And the prospects are that we'll continue to be veiled in mystery for some time to come. And we can pick at our souls until doomsday but we'll never know the how or the why or the which of the simplest act we commit. Then why demand this superhuman understanding from our friends?

However, if you simply MUST have understanding, lady, I can probably give you one small hunk of it which will hold you for a while. Here it is: You have your number wrong. All these emotional flip-flops which you pull are not a sign of a de luxe nature. They are merely a sign that you are chuck full of common, ordinary, human cussedness. You have no corner on moods. Everyone else has 'em, too. Other people can control them. So can you. But the truth is, you don't want to control them. You want to grab the spotlight by strutting your stuff and your yen for understanding is simply a yen for applause. There is the truth about yourself Ellen? Aren't you glad you asked for it?
